HENRY PETERSON & CO., Publishers, No. 319 Walnut St., Philad'a.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1868.

Price $2.50 A Year, in Advance. Single Number 5 Cents.

CONET

Oh, lay her gently in the mould; Cover her o'er; She from her bed so dark and cold Will come no more! Hushed now for ever is her song, So touched with fire; Fain would I still its strains prolong

On Memory's lyre. Ye gentle gales, that breathe of Spring, Flit o'er her grave,
And when ye balmy odors bring,
Give as she gave.

Oh, nurse the willow-tree that weeps O'er her sweet breast : ourish each fond flower that keeps Watch o'er her rest.

soft and fragrant summer breeze, Her grave come nigh, And linger 'mong the cypress-trees That o'er her sigh. Ye brightest stars of shining spheres, Smile from above; Thou rosy morn, thy dewy tears Weep o'er my love.

Oh, weep them at thy dawning hour, When none is near;
Oh, fill the chalice of each flower
With ohe pure tear.
So should they drop upon the ground
From flow'rets' eyes, They'll fitly consecrate the mound 'Neath which she lies

.... SYDNIE ADRIANCE:

OR,

Trying the World.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY AMANDA M. DOUGLAS, AUTHOR OF "IN TRUST," "CLAUDIA," &c

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1885, by H. Federson & Co., in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States, in and for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.]

The sun rose gloriously the next morning. I watched it through my little window, longing for a more extended view, and debating within myself upon the propriety of seeking it, when a waiter stopped at my door with Mr. St. John's card, on which was written in pencil-'If Miss Adriance will come on deck, she will be amply repaid by the beautiful scene."

Obeying my first impulse of resentment, I returned an answer declining. It was a pitiful gratification after all, for I was tormented with mere bits and fragments of glowing dawn. I had a passion for these changeful pictures of sea and sky. The tremulous rays of gold and crimson wandered fitfully through my little room, and the soft light brought visions of the greater glory

The noise and commotion brought me The noise and commotion brought me back to common life. I felt awkward and nervous about meeting Mr. St. John, and wondered how we would get over our dispute of last night. I might have spared my speculations and the resolves with which I fortified my mind. He was calm and gracious, totally ignoring all the disagreeable is given by the cool eyes that I knew fathomed much more than they chose to reveal.

From the station it was a long drive to the St. John mansion. Through broken woodling and where ranged old trees were mass.

She was thirty-five, I afterwards learned, three years her brother's senior, but one would readily have believed her ten years younger. A remarkably beautiful wo-man, pure blonde in type, barely medium size, and gracefulness itself. To watch her was like listening to music. I felt ugly and overgrown beside her.

won by the charm.
e scanned me from head to foot, but I did not read disapproval in the languid, purple blue eyes, so I ventured to breathe

bright and fresh you look," she "I can believe that you heeded my injunction, Stuart," glancing at her brother, "and did not keep her up half the night

As that seems to be my pet employment, lines

"You like it," Mr. St. John said under there was some danger."

His voice was just dashed with irony, reminding me of the delicate flavor of bitter startled me.

"Like is a poor word," and I felt the fond of children.

"I believe I do not usually carry traces of it. such simple dissipation in my face.

"It's folly to waste one's good looks when it amounts to nothing;" and she smiled in a charming fashion. "Now, if you please we will have some breakf at, and then Miss Adriance and I can affe at to dismiss you, as we are going on a shot pring expedition."

There was a little expressive curl to his lips, as his face sett set into an indifference that made it positively cold.

She was very g acrous and entertaining, and gave his hand to his sister.

She was very g racious and entertaining, and I could not 'selp feeling at home with her, indeed could not help liking her, but I had a misgivir g that there was the least spice of conte apt in the approval Mr. St. John gave. W/hen we returned to the parlor, he bade us "good morning," and sauntered "Now we will hold a little consultation,"

"Now we will hold a little consultation," Mrs. Lawre ace said, with a girlish interest and eathur aisem that was not affectation, although it seemed to border upon it. "I am going to take you to Newport, and I expect you to create quite a sensation."

"Dor't expect too much of me," I said, with a sudden fear.

"My dear, you don't know your own nower at all. How should you, indeed? With your style and looks you ought to make a decided impression. Rest assured that I shall give you every advantage."

"I do not question your generosity," I returned, "but my own"—desire, I was about to say, then changed it to "ability."

"You will feel different about that presently. Then you are quite an heiress, an-sently. Then you are quite an heiress, another item in your favor, and when you do fairly take your place and feel at home in it, you will like the triumphs. Only you must not fall in love too soon."

it, you will like the triumphs. Only you must not fall in love too soon."

"I believe I am not very susceptible."

She smiled approval. "The first thing will be to get your wardrobe in order," she continued. "I know you have nothing available, so we will go out and supply ourselves. Your dresses will be made at home under my own supervision. I have a maid who is worth fifty modifies. Are you ready to go worth fifty modistes. Are you ready to go now, or would you rather rest for an hour or two?" worth fifty modistes.

I signified my willingness, and we set out immediately. It was my first induction into the mysteries of fashionable life, and I yielded to Mrs. Lawrence's suggestions the more readily in order that I might not betray my own ignorance. But I really wendered when and how I should find use for half the articles she purchased, and now and then gave a thought to my resolves of the evening before, comprehending that it would be more difficult to assimilate the two lives than I had believed. And yet I could not help being interested. When a shopkeeper places before you elegant goods in their ost enticing light, how can you fail to ad-before night had spent what seemed to me a quarter of my fortune at least, but the shop-ping was done. Thirza, a quadroon maid, hardly less beautiful than her mistress, was busy all the evening packing, and the next morning we resumed our journey, stopping at night to rest, for Mrs. Lawrence had no idea of unduly fatiguing herself.

Mr. St. John I hardly saw at all, but we fathomed much more than they chose to improved you

cious, totally ignoring all the disagreeable incidents that had passed between us. I absolutely became confused.

Mrs. Lawrence was awaiting us at a hotel, and we drove thither. She was not up yet, as o we both waited in her little parlor. Mr. St. John brought me a book and some papers, and occupied himself in reading. Well, the man certainly was a Sphynx!

After awhile Mrs. Lawrence made her appearance. She was thirty-five, I afterwards of the forest bathed. The air was fragrant with the spiciness of the distant pine woods, and occasionally some weigh some quite new to

The road became clearer presently, and at a little distance I espied a great gray stone mansion, ivy covered, and apparently in the overgrown beside her.

"My dear Miss Adriance—" and her voice had something of the peculiarity of her brother's, a kind of liquid sweetness that attracts one involuntarily. I could not help wildest profusion. The house was an old, midst of the most picturesque confusion. quaint mixture of different styles of archi-tecture, and had probably been constructed at different periods. The front was broken by recesses and balconies and deep windows. Derfect success. by recesses and balcomes and deep windows, and at one corner rose a turret, that added to the general effect. It was so cosy and roomy looking, so really homelike, for all its strange beauty, that my! sart gave a quick, involuntary thrill. I lea sed out of the carriage, eager to take in every aspect of love-

m color rising to my face.
And in six months you will weary of tainable to every life."

I glanced furtively at his face. It had gloomed over with some unseen thought, and the eyes seemed weary and wistful. "Home," he said as he sprang out lightly and gave his hand to his dater.

"Well," he continued, swisting me, "are we to be friends, Miss Adriance? Have you forgiven me for ruthlessly demolishing some of your airy fabrics?"

"I should be generous to my worst enemy now." I replied softly. "Who could hold malice in this world of bewildering beauty." I did not dare glance up again, for so strange spell seemed to shadow me. Wa really entering an enchanter's realm? Was I

CHAPTER III.

Our aspirations, our soul's genuine life, Grow torpid in the din of worldly strife, —Faust,

The interior at Laurelwood was not less The interior at Laurelwood was not less charming than the scenes without. I was lost in a maze of beauty, fairly bewildered with spacious halls and stairs, niches out of which some graceful old world goddess smiled, or bore her burden of fragrant flowers. A kind of tropical sensuous case pervaded every spot. You heard the murmur of the fountains without, making a sign bullet of the sensuous case. dim, lulling music, and were woodd insensibly to repose.

I was shown to an elegant suite of rooms next to those of Mrs. Lawrence. The quaintly carven furniture, the light, delicate carpets, and the luxurious couches and chairs gave me visions of delight. There was an aesthetic side to my nature certainly. And then I went back to my childhood with its hardness and plainness, its long solitary days. Was it really I who had a right to these lovely rooms, who was to be waited upon and queen it as royally as I liked! For nothing would please Mrs. Lawrence hetter.

Thirza came in to arrange my hair while her mistress was resting from the fatigue of her journey. "How magnificent!" she said her journey. "How as she took it down.

Fine, soft and abunwas handsome dant, a perfect midnight ma

"Miss Adriance has a little foreign blood," continued.
A Spanish grandmother," and I laughed.
It is in your figure and carriege as well.

And your eyes show it."

Some of the girls at school had envied me my eyes and complexion. They were both dark and wild, I thought.

dark and wild, I thought.

The deft fingers wove wonderful braids and compacted them in strange devices. Then she broke off a spray of white jasmine and twined it in and out. After that she took an inventory of my dresses and decided upon white. Perhaps the contrast made it so becoming, at all events it was my fa-

"But there's no style to it," she said disdainfully.

"Up to this time I have been only a school girl," I replied, with a little smile. "There shoulders, the head proudly poised, the fore head low and broad, the features regular, but too immobile, I thought, and a soft, reseate flush warming up the clear, fine skin. I had not considered the subject greatly before, but I was glad to look as well, espe-cially in a place like this where all the surroundings were exqui

Sometime afterward Mrs. Lawrence enteroccasionally some weird song quite new to me, broke from the throat of an unseen warbler. It seemed like going into an en-chanted country. as a strong contrast between us. She was finished, so elegant, a perfect embodiment

How much you have been improved,' said in a pleasant tone. "You need a more brilliance and vivacity to your face, though under some circumstances that air of indifference would be superb.

I flushed deeply, not with pride, but rather with a sense of humiliation. I fancies that I should soon hate having every slight change in looks commented upon

"Do not count too confidently upon my "All people may

She smiled, and nodded sagaciously.

'I think I know the world pretty well.
You must not spoil your triumphs by any girlish gaucheries. I think I shall enjoy ha-

"No," I said impulsively, "I could never warm, human heart.

"What if I had been irredeemably ugly?"

"You were not, so we will not trouble ourselves with suppositions," she returned with charming amiability. "Truth to tell, plain people always offend a certain sense of

"But one cannot help it if one grows plain, or was born so." "It is a great misfortune," and she shrugged her fair shoulders with infinite grace.

The summons to dinner interrupted the conversation, and I was not sorry, for I found myself warming with the sort of injustice she displayed. Would I not have needed a home and friends under any circumstances ! Afterward Mr. St. John asked me to walk through the grounds, and I was delighted to disagre comply, for I had only taken tantalising glimpses of them.

"Don't keep her out too long in the night air," Mrs. Lawrence said, as we went down the broad steps.

A peculiar expression passed over his face suppose suppose

A peculiar expression passed over his face that tempted me to smile How unlike they ere—this sister and brother.
"One always pays the penalty for superior refinements," he said in a low tone and with a touch of sarcasm "I have not arrived at that stage where it is of momentous importance to me," I returned laughingly.

He made no reply, but seemed lost in con-templation of the graveled walk. Then we turned into a winding path. The lovely night, with its great glowing stars and slivery moon, the air heavy with fragrance, filled my soul with a sense of unutterable beauty. Some tasteful hand had vied with beauty. Some tasteful hand had vied with nature here, and produced marvellous per-fection. Dells that were so thickly wooded they seemed miniature forests, nooks with an old grey rock shaded by a border of shrub-bery at the back, and a tiny stream purling its way along or tumbling over some resistance and forming a cascade of pure spray. Everywhere a variety. The grounds made to look much larger by this arrangement, and something to attract the eye continually

One wandered on and on.
Presently Mr. St. John thawed a little, though his silence had not been at all incomfortable. I don't know that I could have talked at first, for I was filled with the solemn awe a sense of affluent beauty always gives me. I want to be quiet and take large draughts of measureless content. Once or gives me. I want to be quiet and take large draughts of measureless content. Once or twice he had glanced at me, and I felt that my mood had been perfectly understood. It is a comfort to be with people who do not ciety mask, which you will find very consist upon your explaining every phase of

He spoke of the night first, and then called up some foreign remembrances. He had liefs, the faculty of making perfect pictures in description, every subject was tinted and attextured by a mind not only vivid, but refined and discriminating. Histened like one under the spell of a charmer.

but in some manner Mr. Anthon's name was mentioned. I noticed how the voice that I had thought exquisitely modulated before eves and glowing face disarmed her.

tes and glowing face disarmed her.

She would have been inexpressibly shock. It had she known that after Thirza was one I left my bed and sat for a long while touched by passing events.

Shortly after this we were surprised by a some I left my bed and sat for a long winde by the open window. The glorious night tempted me, but I could not have slept. Everything was too new and unreal. This did not mean to introduce me to her ordinase and luxury, these lovely sights and entrancing sounds awayed me powerfully. I Thirza announced to me that Mr. Graham thanks of the country to t trancing sounds awayed me powerfully. I was almost afraid that like Abou Hassan's should soon hate having every slight in looks commented upon.

Shawls, scarfs, bonnets, laces, and gloves.

Shawls, scarfs, bonnets, laces, and gloves.

I had experienced no special want in that arranged until they pleased Mrs. Lawrence's direction. In fact I had not half examined the place yet.

The next day I was in constant demand.

Shawls, scarfs, bonnets, laces, and gloves.

I had experienced no special want in that arranged until they pleased Mrs. Lawrence's direction. In fact I had not half examined the place yet.

The next day I was in constant demand.

I had experienced no special want in that direction. In fact I had not half examined the place yet.

Mr. Graham was two or three and twenty. It was like being fed upon sweets until one well. was taking, and I found a curious interest in any watching her. Always cool and unruffled, the patient to the last degree; quick sighted to sconced myself in the deep rose-embowered window and was lazily reading.

"How cool and delightful," he said. "But are you not playing truant?"
"From what?" and I glanced up rather

"I supposed you would devote every mo-ment to the work-room. What if your dresses are spoiled?"

dresses are spoiled?

"They are in better hands than mine, and do not altogether engross me."

"I am afraid your education is incomplete. And essays too!" for he had taken up my

"One needs something to preserve the mental equilibrium."
"It should be a 'Mirror of Fashion,' or

'The art of making one's self agreeable.'"
'Because you consider me particularly disagreeable and antiquated?"
He colored.

I am anxious to have you succeed as

"What is to be the test of my succeas?"
"Scores of lovers, and a rich husband, I suppose."

"I am afraid I shall not meet your expectations," I returned, gravely. "If I should come to be considered an encumbrance at Laurelwood—"

Somehow I could not resist the tempta-tion of saying it; but I saw that I had an-gered him. One of those subtle flashes came into his eyes, and a white line about his mouth. He looked steadily at me for an "Pardon me," I said, in some confusion.

"But you do vex me when you pretend to think that I have no higher aim in life than mere frivolity—that I can be content with fine dresses and admiration, or that I look upon marriage as the only termination to be desired."

"How you run over these things," he re-turned, with a curious inflection, "and you don't understand one of them. What girl ever did at eighteen!"

"Am I more ignorant than the generality women?" I asked, nervously. "More utopian, perhaps, Miss Adriance; 4 am rather anxious to see you fairly launched in the world of fashion. You will find it very different from your fancies. And you will do just about as your neighbors." I took up my book again and opened it, but my pulses were racing along at an angry speed. How was it that he managed to vex me so easily?

"I shall never wear a mask, or think it necessary to hide the truth or any of my be-liefs. I do suppose I can find people gene-rous enough to make allowance for youth and inexperience. Human nature is not altogether unjust and faithless, or suspi-

Nearly every one sets out with high I don't know how it came around at length, ut in some manner Mr. Anthon's name was at the commencement—the sky is clear, the sentioned. I noticed how the voice that I ad thought exquisitely modulated before rich is time I rave seem only a school argin, "I replied, with a little smile. "There was not much need of style."

"Look at yourself and see if I have not improved you."

I turned to the full length mirror. What wraith or vision met me! Tall, rather inschend to slenderness, but not thin, drooping shoulders, the head regular pathos. They had spent some time at Laurelwood. I felt that he had interested Mr. St. John some way in trial of patience. One can work better than my behalf. How kind and thoughtful he had always been for me.

Liked Mr. St. John some way in trial of patience. One can work better than one can stagnate."

"I shall find my life work some where."

had always been for me.

I liked Mr. St. John much better for this glimpse of tenderness. The man was not all cynicism or sarcasm then. In fact I began to reconsider my hasty judgment. Was it anything more than anger because he had teased me?

We stayed out quite late in spite of Mrs. Lawrence's entreaty, but I think my bright eves and glowing face disarmed her. mind was continually occupied with trifles was in the drawing-room and would remain

palace it might vanish presently, and I find in its stead some cold, grey reality.

The next day I was in constant demand.

"I'm glad enough," she said. "It must be lonesome for you this being secluded like I had experienced no special want in that with stray remnants of boyish beauty that had not yet settled into maturity. He had is surfeited. had not yet settled into maturity. He had not yet settled into maturity. He had I did try to feel grateful for the pains she is soft, pleasant voice, and a certain enthusia on that made kim an interesting cor passion. He was taking the world in a different manner from Mr. St. though the latter made an admirable b

You must not spon your follows: I think I shall enjoy having a protege amazingly, though at first I was quite unwilling that Mr. Anthon should leave you to our care. He always tasked of you as a little girl, and I am not especially foul of children."

Frank at least. Dainty and sweet and tender as she seemed, I felt that she had no warm, human heart.

patient to the usa usgre, patient to the usa usgre, and because the work of the work

Later in the evening he neked me for Mrs. Lawrence had listened to my playing and singing with due regard for what it would do for me in acciety. But it was a passion with me, and when I found that I could kindle another soul, it gave me a sudden inspiration. I saw his eyes dilate with pleasure, and a fitful color wandered over his face. How strangely those pathetic old ballads stir one's heart! Love, sweet for all hallads aftr one's heart! Love the stift pain, tempting in spite of thorny ways. Men and women content at having drained the county of bliss and asking no more of life. the cup of bliss and asking no more of life. Had we fallen upon more material days and treit grad and happy that hight—why, I could not tell. When Mr. Graham left us the next morning, it seemed as if some brightness had gone out of the place.

I felt glad and happy that night-why, I

I stood on the balcony gathering up stray threads of memory, when Mr. St. John approached, having been to the gates with his great.

You deserve to be congratulated," he said; and although I understood the tone, I For what ?"

"Upon your conquest. But to save a broken heart, I will tell you that Mr. Gra-ham is engaged to his cousin—a kind of con-venient family arrangement, I believe, she being an heiress."

"I do not think that fact would weigh a particle with Mr. Graham," I said as earnestly as I felt.

"Oh, you have unlimited faith."

"And your warning was altogether unnecessary." I retorted, scornfully.

"It was merely pastime upon both sides, then! Well, you acquitted yourself admirably. You will not have much to learn at Newport."

Newport."
"I believe I did only what common cour

"I believe I did only what common cour-tesy required," I said, haughtily.

"A woman's excuse for trifling."

"It is well there are some whose fine per-ception enables them to distinguish between ordinary politeness and the gratification of a foolish vanity. While there are such cool, clear-cycle people in the world, we need not fear for secrets."

"Undoubtedly;" and his voice was irri-tatingly sweet. "Neither may we appre-hend any Quixotic reform when the prophets of the new faith are diverted by a word or look from some fanciful sentimentalist.

look from some fanciful sentimentalist."

If I could have annihilated him with a glauce, I should have done so. And he looking calm and handsome, with that buffling smile playing about his face.

"You ridicule my high aims; and if I find any satisfaction in ordinary pleasures you sheer. What is your idea!"

What is your ideal?

sneer. What is your ideal?"

"And you are a fiery radical," he said, ignoring my question. "I wonder—" a little lower, as if he was thinking to himself—
"If you mean to play with hearts in that fashion."

Will it do any harm? Are men so sensitive and delicate?"

"Oh, no," he said, dryly. "It may go hard with some of them at first, but they soon get used to the warfare. It does damage faith a little, but those old-fashioned virtues are at a discount in modern life."

"I think you wrong us all;" I said, more hurt than I cared to show. "If we wound any one, it is because we have first been pained ourselves."

Mrs. Lawrence crossed the hall, and I took shelter under her kindly wing. She put her slender white hand over my shoulder, and presently we walked away together.
"What was Stuart saving?" she asked.

"What was Stuart saying?" she asked but I could see it was not from any curi osity. "You must not mind his queer no tions; he has always been odd. 'I think it was living here so much alone, and the St. Johns are peculiar people. I married very young, and went away; and have only been back since the death of Mr. Lawrence, which irred a few years ago.

I was silent. "My dear," she continued, in her soft. musical tones, "you really surprised me by your self-possession. You will be a very fascinating woman, only you must not ruin your success by falling in love imme-

Why? In what manner would it inter-

Oh, it breaks up the general interest. When a girl becomes engaged, the real strife for her is over, and she is soon superseded by newer attractions. You need not marry for a year or so. I think I can make it very

Is it worth while to strive against th current? Surely youth and pleasure go hand in hand, and one may find elements of truth have."

Why then tor"She is sitting by that table youder, beand beauty in any existence. Why then tor-ture one's self with a scourging sense of duty in continually grasping at the unattainable. Could I not take the richness of life without stooping to its dross?

I think Mr. St. John must dislike me. He is very kind to his sister—listens to her plans without making one objection, does many things for her pleasure, and never success or shows the bitter side of his nature. For he is bitter and stern, a strong, masterful man, and yet his very power attracts.

I wonder if I am unstable. Sometimes I feel afraid of myself. After all, how much can one help or hinder. If I only had a patient, trusty friend that I could go to in ments. But I should as soon ding in this marble Clytic as Mrs. Lawrence. Both are sweet, but cold.

CHAPTER IV

Well, well,

But you must cultivate conrect; it will pay you.
Study a dimple, work hard at a smile.

The things west delicate require most paine.

Festus.

profound, we went over them very agree- and Mrs. Lawrence indulged in a rest on the and Mra Lawrence induced in a rest on the sofa, I sat by the window enjoying the changeful scone below, that tooked to my unpacticed eye like irremediable confusion, and yet it attracted me wonderfully. I was to join this gay throng, and take my share of leasure.

We did not go down to the parlors until vening. Mrs. Lawrence looked exquisitely lovely, and I fancied almost as youthful as I. Thirza had not over-dressed me, and I felt quite at home in my new attire. But scene rendered me pearly breathless with surprise. Elegant women, stately and well-bred men grouped together talking, smiling, and posing themselves with the rare grace of statuary. What a brilliant picture brother were surrounded by a throng of old friends and warmly welcomed. I responded to introductions that I felt sure I should never remember, and was rather confused, I am afraid. Mr. St. John was so kind that I almost wanted to express my gratitude. He answered questions for me, and warded off anything like awkwardness until I began to talk quite naturally.

Presently the circle widened a little. I was standing by an open window, when I felt my arm clasped, and a familiar voice exclaimed, scarcely above a whisper-'In the name of all that's remarkable for inders, how did you come here, Sydnie Adriance I turned and found a school friend, Laura Hastings.

"Are you speechless?" she continued, laughingly. "Or are you out on a marque laughingly. "Or are you out on a marque of the strict breaks." rade, where conferring one's identity breaks the charm, and resolves you back into a Cinderella?"

Cinderells?"

Neither, Silent from surprise only."

Didn't I tell you that I expected to make my debut in the world of fashion? How happens it that you were not equally communi-

Because I had no idea of what my des-

"Let us walk up and down this piazza, for I want to catechise you. In the first place, when did you arrive?"
"This morning."

"This morning." Laura Hastings was an odd, vivacious girl, ho always seemed to carry every thing her own way. We had been very good friends, without the slightest spark of affection. She occasionally ridiculed me, and I retorted by nouncing her heartless.

Who brought you here?" she went on.
My guardian, Mr. St. John, and his sister, Mrs. Lawrence.

"Pretty well, so far. What kind of a woman is Mrs. Lawrence? Young, rich and 'All three,"

e person. Do you aspire to belle-ss Adriance?" "The gods are unjust to bestow so much I laughed at her piquant manner, and said

I had no such ambition. "Then you are not as sensible as I sup-posed. With your face and style I would have half Newport in love with me, and the other half dying with envy."

"That would not be a very high gratifica-

Don't be saintish and nonsensical! You should have left all that at school. How-ever, if you are generous, I may stand a bet-ter chance. I've been here only a week and had an offer already, besides strongly interesting a New York millionaire-but he is enough to be my father."

You refused the offer:" "Of course. He was a young artist, my ousin Carrie's bright particular. She put She put on airs and went to a stupid little country hovering in the flame. He was only singed a little, and will go back to her with more He was only singed devotion than ever, so no one was hurt. I believe I rather tempted him to come here." "O, Laura! Why, when you did not mean to marry him?"

"To tease Carrie a little. She has an idea that goodness is all the capital one needs in this world. It is a poor investment to my look over her dresses and help her choose

But truth and honor and generosity ght to meet with some recognition," I said warmly.

"You cling to your first love pertina-ciously, I see. A month at Newport will convert you to the true faith. Plain women convert you to the true faith. Plain women may carry about a list of virtues as long as their sober faces, but the handsome one sall believe alike. And you are rather magnificent. You've had a little help, for I know you never possessed all these ideas of your "We simply accepted the invitation." "Well, if you had taken immense pains, wouldn't have played a better card. I "Can you see your Mrs Lawrence? I'm young men are counting upon an introduc-wild to know what sort of a chaperone you have."

young men are counting upon an introduc-tion to-night. I was quite in demand be-cause I happened to be at school with you."

golden ringlets." "Y
"My dear Sydnie, I'm delighted. I can dear.

your beautiful Mrs. Lawrence—why. Sydnie, you live in Virginia, don't you?" I answered in the affirmative. "You are the most fortunate girl alive! Sometimes I Think how you used to study, as if you expected to teach for a living. I've heard only had a paould go to in they're immense friends. He is as rich as a they're immense friends. He is as rich as a

But you must cultivate voursetly it will pay you.
Study a dimple, work hard at a smalle:
The things most delicate require most pains.

Festus.

We were in perfect order at last, and started on our campaign. To say that I was not interested, would be untrue. There was a fascination about seeing the world in this guiss. Several of the girls at school had counted largely on a season at Newport or Saratoga, while I held my peace, knowing nothing of my future.

Mr. St. John had engaged a suite of rooms, so all we had to do was to enter in and take possession. While Thirms unpacked animation, "though I have a fancy that he could make a good fight. There's so much in his face, a sort of strength and defiance that always rouses one, and in figure and carriage he is splendid. He has just spoken "What avails it to struggle against the conto Mrs. Westervelt.

"That is Mr. St. John!"
She turned her eyes full upon me, and studied me curiously.

"You're in love with him. of course?"
"I am not in love with him." I tried to say it calmly, but I had a misgiving that my voice was not quite steady. Not because her accusation was true, but from its suddenness.

"Then you are a greater dunce than I imagined. Why, he cannot be much over thirty, just a good age. Was he at home when you went to Laurelwood?"

"He came for me at school. Mrs. Lawrence was in New York awaiting me," I said width.

"You do mean to marry him? Honor

"I have no expectations of the kind, neither will I discuss him in that fashion." "Don't get vexed. You will not mind if I flirt a little with him?"

"As you like." My tone was calm enough then, but my face burned with secret aunoy-"I am dying for my introduction. Let us go in."

"O, my dear," Mrs. Lawrence exclaimed in a relieved tone, "I had begun to wonder where you were when I saw Mr. St. John alone. I am glad you have met a friend." She looked Laura all over, and I had begun to understand her so well that I knew her verdict was favorable. Mrs. Hastings was a trylich and rather handly took the contraction.

stylish and rasher haughty looking woman, Mrs. Westervelt very sweet and gracious. Somehow I was drawn to her at once.

Laura and Mr. St. John fell into a light skirmish. Without being absolutely witty, she was quick and piquant, and it appeared to me never enough in carnest to be vexed if any one demolished her opinions. He was not severe, and kept back the sarcasm with which he had treated me on our first meet-ing. She certainly amused and interested

I had never thought Laura handsome at school. She was showy, vivacious, and possessed the art of adapting herself to any person. She had all sorts of beliefs, enthusiasms and graces, and was very generally admired. To-night, amid this brilliance, she did appear unusually attractive. did appear unusually attractive.

Presently Mr. St. John took us for a pro menade and ices. They had all the conver-sation, for I only spoke when either appealed to me; but I tried to decide what La fascination for such a man was, and failed. It was quite beyond my ken. After quite a ramble we found the party discussing a hop that was to take place the next evening. Afterward our circle widen-ed, and I found myself enjoying the gay talk, the music, and the changing groups. The newness interested me strongly

The next morning we went to ride. A friend of Mr. St. John's sent the horses, and accompanied us himself. A very agreeable gentleman withal, and a rather distinguish ed looking cavalier. The day was delightful. The sun went in and out among masses of dreamy floating cloud, the fragrant air seemed to throb to the beating of the ocean waves beyond. All around was life, bliss-ful, hopeful life. A kind of auspicious be-sinning, yet now and then I thought of the solitary child who had first learned to love nature while scrambling over lonely moss-grown rocks. In those restricted visions how could she dream what the dawn of womanhood would be? It was curious what a listless air the hotel took on about midday. Young men lounged in the shadiest corners of the balconies, finding it too warm for billiards. Bathing was over, downers were taking an after-dinner map, young ladies had disappeared to renew their beauty and freshness for the one for the hop. "I suppose you'll be magnificent. That comes of having a fortune. What a splendid manager Mrs. Lawrence is! Your ride of this morning was just the thing, and created a sensation. That salmon-tinted plume in your hat nearly drove me crazy, and you sat like a duchess. She has given you a royal pleasant for you; and I confess to liking you a great deal. But I came near forgetting my chief errand; Thirza wanta you."

Afterward I went to my own room. How lovely it looked, and how really delightful life was. Somehow I cannot help enjoying quick glance around and said—

"Can you see your Mrs. Lawrence?" I'm youn men are counting upon an introduction. of your meek protestations. Half-a-dozen | pleadingly.

tween two ladies, wears blue crape, and has golden ringlets."

"You can't make me cross with you, my dear. I want you for a confidante. I must foresee a charming family party. The ladvon her left, in mauve sitk, is my august mamma, and the other, Mrs. Westervelt, from New York, an intimate friend. And your beautiful Mrs. Lawrence—why. Sydnie, wouldn't there be one tremendous sensation! You don't half appreciate it. I mean to make love to Mrs. Lawrence and get my-self invited to Laurelwood."

I smiled in spite of my annoyance,
"Confession number one will begin tocorrow," she said as I went out of the room. "Confession number one will begin tomorrow," she said as I went out of the room.

The hop was enchanting. Thirza made me supremely elegant. Mrs. Lawrence was in a radiant mood, and I was pleased, delighted, charmed. So many handsome and polished men, and lovely women, such brilliant lights and delicious musics, low talk they're immense friends. He is as they're immense friends. He is as they're immense friends. He is as they are all who were described in a radiant mood, and I was proposed in a radiant

What avails it to struggle against the conwhat avails it to stringle against the con-tinual temptations that beact one—trying and failing, repenting and making new re-solves, when a little surface gilding carries off the palm? Do those who exhort us to off the palm? Do those who exhort us to be earnest and pure in heart, simple and truthful, really believe these homely virtues win a bright reward? The approval of one's conscience is something, to be sure, but are not the people who seem to be utterly deficient in conscience the happiest? At least they take the smaller share of suffering.

Moralizing over a ball! Well, I see happy. The compliments and small talk did not

The compliments and small talk did seem as vapid as I expected. Mr. St. John appeared to enjoy it, though he did not dance—mever does, his sister says. He was very attentive, introducing people to me, yet he was just as kind to Laura.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SATURDAY EVENING POST.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1868.

TERMS. The terms of THE POST are the same as those of hat well known magazine, THE LADY'S FRIEND in order that the clubs may be made up of the paper and magazine conjointly when so desired—and are as pollows:—One copy (and a large Premium Steel Enand magazine conjointly when so desired—and are a follows:—One copy (and a large Premium Steel Engraving) $2.50; Two copies $4.00; Four copies $64.00; Eight copies (and one gratic) $12.00. One copy of THE POST, and one of THE LADY'S FRIEND, $4.00. Every person getting up a club will receive the Premium Engraviza in addition. Subscribers in the British Provinces must result wenty cents extra for postage. Papers in a club will be sent to different post-offices if desired. Single numbers sent on recent of five cents. Contents of scalt to different poet offices if desired. Single shorts sent on receipt of five cents. Contents of and of Lady's Friend always entirely different, remitting, name at the top of your letter, Post-office, county, and State. If possible, pro-a Poet-office order on Philadelpinia: or get a t on Philadelphia or New York, payable to our r. If a draft cannot be had, send I nited States s. Do not send money by the Express Compa-natics you pay their charges.

NEWING MACHINE Premium. For 50 sub-1NG MACHINE Premium. For 30 sun-it $2.50 apicee—or for 30 subscribers and 200 i send Wheeler & Wilson's No. 3 Machine, S. By remitting the difference of price in whicher priced machine will be sent. Every or in a Premium Hest, insemuch as he pays ill get a large Premium Steel Engraving.

HENRY PETERSON & CO., 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

keep copies of any manuscripts they may send to us, in order to avoid the possibility of loss; as we cannot be responsible for the safe keeping or return of any manuscript.

The Death Shadow of The Poplars.

We can supply back numbers of THE POST to Jan. 4th, containing the whole of this interesting story.

SYDNIE ADRIANCE: OR, TRYING THE WORLD.

We began in THE POST of April 4th, the bove novelet by Miss Douglas

It is the story of a young girl's adventures in "trying the world," and we think will be perused with a great deal of interest.

It will probably run through from fifteen to twenty numbers of THE POST.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

We would suggest to the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals-and an ex cellent and greatly needed society it is to take a glance occasionally at the manner in which horses, monkeys, &c., are treated in our circuses. The whip, we are inclined to think, is much too freely resorted to by those who have the training of these so-called brute performers.

Forepaugh's Menageric and Circus is now on its travels—an excellent Menageric and a very poor Circus—but what pleasure can be derived by any intelligent and tender-heart ed audience, from the displays of the leading horse (if we may use the term) in that exhibition. To see an animal naturally of a very fine intelligence, with its high spirit all broken down by the whip, and shivering and trembling over the difficult feats required of it, so far from giving pleasure, almost makes a sympathetic observer sick. Ah, let proud man say what he pleases, if a soul does not look out of many a dog's and horse's eye, Ah, let proud sorrowfully saving 'Am not I also a child of the great Creater, and a bro-ther of you who are more gifted?"—then we for one cannot understand how such depth "I wish you would find other things to and fervor and intelligence of expression can be possible

"There are more things in Heaven and earth. Than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

And cruelty to an animal touches every hu mane man and woman precisely as cruelty to a human being docs—the only difference being one of degree and not of kind.

— Apropos to this subject, the elephant Romeo, attached to the same exhibition, did a funny thing the other day at German town. Going along the road in the prepara-tory parade, he spied a little pool of muddy water, and drawing up a goodly portion in his trunk, he discharged it all over his keeper, who was riding on horseback near him, muddying his clothes shamefully. Ro-meo is not a well-behaved animal—we believe he killed a keeper not long sincedoubtless he looks upon this whole matter of his captivity, and his being paraded about to make sport for the philistines, as a very unjust affair. From his limited point of view doubtless he is right.

APPLETON'S NEW BOOK FACTORY .- We have received an engraving of the new Printing House and Bindery creeted by the Messrs. Appleton, in Brooklyn. It is a very extensive building, and seems to be ad-mirably adapted in all respects to its pur-

The following, by Tennyson, was recently published in "Good Words"—which paid we don't know how many hundred pounds

I stood on a tower in the wet, And New Year and Old Year met, And winds were roaring and blowing; And I said, "Oh years, that meet in tears, Have ye aught that is worth the knowing? Science enough and exploring. Wanderers coming and going, Matter enough for deploring, But aught that is worth the knowing?" Seas at my feet were flowing, Waves on the shingle pouring, Old Year roaring and blowing, And New Year blowing and roaring.

The following is by Mr. Blank, and though he considers it an improvement on Tenny-son, he has as yet received nothing for it.
"Sich is life!"

I sat in a 'bus in the wet, Good Words I had happened to get, With Tennyson's last bestowing; And I said "O, bard! who work so hard, Have you aught that is worth the knowing? Verses enough, and so boring— Twaddle quite overflowing, Rubbish enough for deploring : But aught that is worth the knowing?
But aught that is worth the knowing?
Placards on walls were glowing,
Puffs in the papers pouring,
Good Words roaring and blowing, Once a Week blowing and roaring.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE SPIRIT OF SEVENTY-SIX; OR, THE lowed by A CHANGE OF BASE, and DOCTOR lowed by A CHANGE OF BASE, and DOCTOR
MONDSCHEIN. "The Spirit of Seventy-Six," which describes things as they are to be in ten years more, when "the oppressed race of women have succeeded in asserting all their rights," is very well told, and will make a very good parlor drama. A Bostonian returns from China, where he has been for many years, and is astonished at what he hears and sees about him. For instance a young lady he meets, Victorine, answers as follows, when asked, "Is there no gayety in Boston now ?"

Boston now?"

"Parties, you mean? I really can't tell you: I've hardly been to a party since my Sophomore year. I don't like them. It is so unpleasant asking gentlemen to ilance—they make such a favor of it, and the nicest ones are engaged ten deep. And then they always want so much supper! Really, after Twe done helping my partner, I'm so tired that when I get home I've hardly strength to turn the latch-key. So I don't often go.

* Does your father let you dance round dances?" Published by Little, Brown & Co.,

Boston.
THE BROWNLOWS. By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
Published by Littell & Gay, Boston.
PUBLIC SPIRIT. A Monthly Magazine.
The April number contains "Mating and Check-mating," "On the Divan," &c. Published by Le Grand Benedict, New York.
THE NAME BRITISH BRYLEY FOR MARCH. THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW for March., Published by Leonard Scott, 140 Fulton street, New York.

DO YOU MEAN TO PROPOSE?

TO BE SET TO MUSIC FOR THE USE OF ALL YOUNG LADIES IN LEAP YEAR.

You come very often, 'tis all very well, You're a very fine man, and a very big swell; You've a very good heart, and a very long

But now to the point !- do you mean to pro-The house is besieged, both by rich and by Who knock all day long at grandmamma's door; They turn up their eyes, and they turn out their toes, But what is all that if they do not propose.

You say that you love me, but love all alone To unmarried girls is a thing quite unknown; You sigh and look down, and present me a

But that is all stuff !- do you mean to propose? am not so hard hearted as I may appear;

Why stop and look sheepish !- there's thing to fear. You men are such geese! only Beelzebub knows

The trouble you give us before you propose! 'Tis almost two seasons since I have been out: You simper and smile and you whirl me about; But this is not business, the horrid time goes, Another will have me if you do not propose!

You take all the airs of a man I've preferred; You keep off the rest, and don't say a word. This is not fair play—a fellow who shows Such uncommon devotion should speak and propose! I want to be married—do you understand? You'd give me a world!—only give me your hand!

One can't go on always with cons and with pros, Never come here again—or be frank and propose ! One of those who suffered most severely by the great Indian Massacre in Min-nesota in 1861, having lost his home and all his relatives, has devoted his life since that event to the work of revenge, and already boasts of having killed one hundred and eight redskips.

eight redskins.
Forty years ago preparations were made for a marriage between a Mr. Shep-pard and a Miss Polly Shipp. For some rea-son the wedding did not take place. Polly remained single, and, in Woodford county, mirably adapted in all respects to its purposes. The Appletons do an immense business, and claim now to have one of the best, if not the very lest establishment in the sixty.

Getting In At Night.

Getting
The door was said Tom, and h The door was locked when I got home, The door was locked when I got nome, and Tom, and how to get in without waking the governor was the difficulty. I know he would give me particular fits if he knew I was out after ten, and the clock had just struck one. The back yard was an impossibility, and but one chance remained. There was a porch over the front door, the roof of which was a few feet below two windows. One of them I knew to be fastened down, and the other one up of the property of the program of the property of the program of and the other opened from a bedroom, which and the other opened from a bedroom, which might or might not be occupied. An old maiden sister of the governor's wife arrived on the same day, and it was very probable that she was in that room; but I knew the bed was in the corner furthermost from the window, and I hoped to be able to get in and through the room without awakening her, and then I had a comparatively easy time of it. So, cetting a plank from the her, and then I had a comparatively easy time of it. So, getting a plank from the neighboring board-pile, I rested it against the eaves of the shed, pulled off my shoes, put them in my pocket and "cooned." All right so far, but I thought it necessary, in order not to rouse suspicion in the morning, to remove the plank; so dragging it up I threw it off the end, and down it went with an awful clatter on a stray dog that had followed me two or three squares, and who immediately set up the most awful whine a mediately set up the most awful whine a hound ever gave tongue to. That started half a dozen dogs in the neighborhood back-ing; a mocking bird in the window above commenced as if he intended to split his throat at it, and a woman in her night clothes appeared at the window across the street. I knew I was safe as far as she was concerned, but if any one came to our win-dow the candle gave light enough to have discovered me. Nobody came, however, and the lady after peering up and down street for a minute or two, popped in her head and retired. The mocking bird still kept up his eternal whistle, and it was full half an hour before he and the dog settled down and gave me a chance to move.

Creeping slowly along the wail till I reached the window, I put my hands on the sill, sprang in, and with my legs dangling out, stopped to listen. Yes, she was in the room, for I was sure I could hear her breathing. After waiting for a minute I cautiously drew up one leg, and putting them down on the After waiting for a minute I cautiously drew up one leg, and putting them down on the floor, was just conscious that I had stepped on something soft and yielding, and was withdrawing them when another yell broke forth at my feet; the old maid jumped from the bed crying "murder!" And the mock-ing bird started again. A little darkey was lying on her back under the window, and I had stepped on her face, and, of course, woke her up. I decided in a moment what to do. The house would be aroused, and I would be caught to a certainty unless I could get to my room before the governor was up; but I hadn't a moment to lose, for the little nigger was screaming; so I started for the door in three steps, struck a chair, stumbled over it, of course, making the awfulest racket you ever heard in the hours of night a peaceful house. The nigger and the d maid screamed louder than ever; the mocking bird screamed louder than a steam whistle, and they fairly made a chorus as I reached the door, however, and quietly and swiftly opened it, and just got into the hall in time to see the old gentleman open the door, with a candle in his hand, and the door, with a candle in his hand, and come hurrying up the stairs. There was a wardrobe near where I stood, and I sprang behind it. Up came the governor, reached the door, opened it and went in, and in the meantime there were all sorts of confusion and inquiry downall sorts of confusion and inquiry downstairs as to what was the matter. Nobody' clse came up, though from where I stood I heard every word of inquiry and explanation in the room. Of course they couldn't make much of it. The little darkey was too much frightened and too sound asleep at the time to tell the truth, and the upshot of the business was that they concluded that she had been dreaming, and the governor, after giving her a sound shaking and explaining the matter to the aroused neighbors from the window, went back to his own room again.

"So far so good." I now had to go down all sorts of confusion and inquiry down-

window, went back to his own room again.

"So far so good." I now had to go down stairs, reach the back door, unbar it, get into the yard, make for my room, which was in the second story of the brick building that stood unconnected with, and about a dozen yards from the main one. After giving everybody another half hour to settle down again I started again, I started. Boys, did you ever try to get up or down Boys, did you ever try to get up or down a pair of stairs at midnight without making a noise? You may try it all sorts of ways, but every step is sure to creak, each with a peculiar noise of its own, and loud enough, you are sure, to awake everybody. I had got nearly to the bottom, when a little dog came trotting up the entry toward me, yelling furiously. A suppressed "come here, Zip!" silenced him, for he recognized me; but the little fellow started the mocking bird, and all the dogs in the neighborhood having learned to take the cue, of course

| Wars of the First Napoleon. France has 1,300,000 men, of whom 550,000 are in the reserve. England has 200,000 men; prussia 1,000,000; Italy about 215,000; Austria 700, our eserve, and Spain about 80,000 mere in reserve, and Spain about 80,000 less they go be accompanies t

having learned to take the cue, of course joined the chorus for a third time. I ran along the passage, reached the door, and unlocked it just as the governor, aroused and unlocked it just as the governor, aroused the second time, opened his door, and seeing a man coming from the house by the back way, of course cried "Thieves! thieves!" and made a rush after me; I was too quick for him, though, opened the door, sprang cut, made for the door that opened into the room below mine, and had just reached it, when crash! within a foot of my bed went a brick, and a voice that I knew belonged to the next door neighbor, Tompkins, joi the governor in the cry of "Thieves! thier murder! murder!" I was safe enough.

murder! murder!" I was safe enough.
Running up stairs, I "shelled" myself quicker than I ever did before or since, and was in bed, sound asleep in half a minute.
Wasn't there a row though? I never heard so many dogs before—the mocking bird, of course, was outdoing all previous efforts—the chickens began to crow—Tompkins, next door, was hallooing "Thieves!"
and calling the governor. I could hear screams and all sorts of noises, and talking among the neighbors, until at length the old gentleman's voice was heard in the yard. gentleman's voice was heard in the yard

m, fortunately, was sound asleep,

Jumping from my bed I raised the win-, rubbed my eyes and looked particu-frightened (which I wasn't) and asked; Why, father, what in the world is the

"There's thieves in the house," was the reply; "get your gun and come down-be He's in the room below you," hallooed Tompkins; "I'm certain of it; I saw him as he ran down, and threw a fire-brick at him. I know he didn't pass the door, Mr. Jones."

I was directed to look out for myself; the governor stood sentinel at the door below, armed with a club, while Tompkins had five minutes to collect aid from the neighbors, and in less than half that time, so thoroughly was every house alarmed, there were a dozen or more usen in the yard armed with guns, pistols and sticks.

The governor led the attack; opening the oor, he called:

"Come out of here, you house-breaking scoundre!! If you attempt to resist, I'll blow your brains out."

Nobody came, however.

"Watch the door while I go in;" and I was told to look sharp, and shoot the rescal was told to look sharp, and shoot the rascal if he came up stairs. A momentary search was sufficient to satisfy everybody that the thief was not in the room.

"He's up-stairs then?" cried Tompkins, for I'll take my Bible oath that he didn't

So up-stairs they trooped, but I had lit a andle by that time, and there was no burglar there. The strictest search, even looking under a boot, didn't show the faintest glar there.

The yard was examined, then the house and everybody was tolerably well satisfied that he bad escaped; but I was appointed sentinel for the rest of the night, and or-sentinel for the rest of the night, and ordered not to go to sleep on my post, (but I did,) under the penalty of a flogging.

The articles missing, on a thorough investigation the next day, were two pies and the old lady's silver thimble. The thimble turned up in a day or two, being discovered under the carpet, but the pies have not been accounted for even to this day. On oath I could have given very material testimony to the deposit of the stolen property, but the case didn't come before any court, and I remained quiet.

mained quiet.

Didn't the local editors loom though? Didn't the local editors loom though? One of them elongated himself through a half column, and headed the article, "A Diabolical and Atrocious Attempt at Burglary and Murder!" describing with graphic particulars the fiendish attempt to throttle Miss L—— and her servant, complimented the coolness of R. Tompkins, Esq., perorating with a withering anathema on the want of vigilance displayed by the policemen.

It was fun for me to see with what wide awake sagacity the watchman used to stop at our front door and listen during his rounds for a month after. The excitement died away, though, after a while. But I'll never forget the night I tried to get in without making a noise.

The British army needs about eighty million dollars to keep up appearances this year. Ours needs half as much more, we year. Ours needs hair as much more, we are sorry to say.

137 It may interest the Brown family, of whom we believe one or two reside in this neighborhood, to know that the Browns are to meet at St. Johnsbury, Vermont, this week, to devise means to secure a property of untold value in England, which ought to belong to them. A Boston newspaper, which evidently does not number many Browns. belong to them. A Boston newspaper, which evidently does not number many Browns among its readers, says of this matter, that every Brown who goes to St. Johnsbury ought at once to have his name changed to Green. [Let no Brown write to us, this is all we know.—Ed. Post.]

**Elastic boot heels are among the latest reported inventions, and the American Artisan commends them.

Artisan commends them.

Mrs. Coates, of Trenton, was in the last car of a train returning from New York, when some man shook a handkerchief imwhen some man shook a handkerchief impregnated with a pungent smell over her face, by which she was instantly rendered unconscious. She ran out of the car, after a struggle, and jumped off just as the car was stopping at Rahway, and was running wildly up the track when secured. Her money was taken from her person, and a violent effort was made to pull a heavy gold ring from her finger. Her dress was cut and torn, the bosom and pockets being cut open by the thieves. It is doubtful if she ever recovers from the effects of the chloroform.

1分 The heaviest single transaction in wheat ever known in the Chicago market, teok place recently. Ramsey Bros. sold to A. Dow one hundred thousand bushels No.

000; Russia 800,000, with 400,000 more in reserve, and Spain about 80,000.

**To Cure a Catarri.—The best

nethod of treatment is dry friction over the whole surface of the body. The use, night and morning, of a coarse towel, or hair mit-ten, so as to produce a glow upon the sur-The use, night ten, so as to produce a glow upon the surface of the body, will not fail to cure, or benefit, nine cases out of ten. Let all the clothing be removed, no matter how cold the weather; and, with the "air bath" thus secured, and friction over the entire surface, the troublesome difficulty is soon removed.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

A marriage ceremony recently came to a rather abrupt termination in Providence, in consequence of the to-be bride putting in a stipulation that the to-be bridegroom should thenceforth eschewhis cigar. The young man replied that he could get along very nuch more comfortably without a wife than he could without his weed, and conse-quently the proposed marriage "ended in moke."

The "steam man," from Newark, is walk for a wager from New Y bany. A gentleman has we gored $1,000 that he cannot go the distance without breaking down. The friends of the steam man are confident that he will win. He will only travel in the day time, not for the reason that sleep is necessary for him, but out of consideration for the comforts of his at-

The New England Methodist Conference has unanimously resolved in favor of prohibiting the sale of liquor.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE IMPEACIMENT.—The trial of the President is progressing, and the Managers expect to close the case for the prosecution in a short period.

CONGRESS.—The bill repealing the tax on condities.—The bill repealing the tax on certain manufactures has been signed by the President, and is now a law. No movement has been made yet towards repealing the oppressive Income Tax.

Rhode Island.—Governor Burnside is

Rhode Island.—Governor Burnside is re-elected by a majority of 4,309—a Republican gain of 115 over last year. Mr. Sprague will be re-elected U. S. Senator.

Germany.—The Naturalization Treaty with the United States, has been ratified almost unanimously by the Federal Parliament. Bismarck stated that hereafter no native of Germany, naturalized in the United States, would be molested on account of his obligations to his parent country, within the borders of the Confederation. The Polish members were among the small mi-Polish members were among the small mi-nority who voted against the ratification. Anti-Prussian riots have taken place in Northern Bavaria. Crowds gathered at several places and made violent demonstra-tions against the Prussian influence and union with the Northern Confederation. THE SOUTHERN STATES.—The New York Commercial Bulletin, in the course of an article on the business interests of the South, says that the depreciation in value South, says that the depreciation in value of farm land in that section since 1860, has been over $646,000,000. In a few sections an influx of Northern settlers has checked the depreciation, but generally, the South is in the lowest state of depression. In Louisiana, lands that were valued at $125 per acre in 1859, are now assessed at $5. Valuable sugar plantations, with machinery that cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, cannot be sold at any price.

TRAIN CROWETH.

be sold at any price.

"That 's Train again."
-- SHAKS: Merchant of Venice.

Listen, listen, all the world,
'Tis I that speak to you;
Three crows for Train, my noble His noble self. Cock-a-doodle-doo

He is devil- Street railways! lots in Omaha I know a thing or two!
I'm devilish smart! I'm up to snuff! Cook-a-doodle doo.

The White House soon will be He anticimy home, Clear out, you stupid crew, Make room for Train, the President. Cock-n-doodle-doo.

He couldn't They seized me on the Scotia, be kept. And into prison threw; But soon the rascals let me out.

Derby and Adams I denounced. A rousing blast I blew; Derby and Adams straight re eigned. Cock-a-doodle-doo.

He stump- I "stumped" all over Ireland, Enormous houses drew.
The people wild for love of me!
Cock-a-doodle-doo.

geth him self. The old world and the new; This, this is fame, Train, hug yourself. Cock-a-doodle-doo.

In everybody's mouth I am,

Is in a fearful stew,
The Cabinet trembles in its boots.
Cock-a-doodle-doo. The British The British lion slinks away,

Whenever I say "boo," And hides his tail between his afraid. legs, Cock-a-doodle-doo

He writeth Epigrams I sometimes write; an epigram. I'll end with one that's new:
"The whistle of street-railway Is—Cock-a-doodle-doo."

—N. Y. Atlas.

George of Hanover, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his marriage, there are no fewer than 1,573 cushions work-

The young ladies at Cambridge City, that the young men shall not be permitted to accompany them home from meeting unless they go to meeting with them.

A Cincinnati lady has seven husbands living. Her address is the city jail.

A New IDEA.—We notice the follow ing item in one of our exchanges ing item in one of our exchanges;—"Mr. Dawson, of Georgia, and Miss McDaniel of Washington City, were married last week in Glenwood Cemetery, near that city, by the side of the grave of the bride's mother. The washington Intelligencer thinks the idea a very 'extraordinary' one."

**T#" A small quantity of pulverized bicarbonate of soda added to ordinary rum arabic or other mucilage, and well shaken up, will prevent the latter from becoming your and otherwise offensive. our and otherwise offensive.

The drain of silver to Asia is exciting great attention in other parts of the world. In fourteen years, upwards of six hundred and fifty million dollars were exported from England and the Mediterranean lone to Asia.

ayed at Niagara Falls in May, to last probably two or three weeks. Among the clubs present will be many from Canada. Among those from the United States will be the Atlantics, Athletics, Mutuals, etc.

†# A down-town merchant, after attending one of our gymnasiums only three weeks, was enabled to take up several very heavy notes.

The London Spectator says twentyfive years of Geo. F. Train's life—as he values imprisonment—would more than extinguish the national debt. The imagination reels

"ONE OF THE CHOSEN."

[Suggested by an engraving with this title recently published by Bradley & Co., 66 N. Fourth street. Philadelphia.]

There are flowers that unclose and bloom in the early morning, to faint, and fade, and die, ere the first sunbeam can kiss the dew from off their fragile cheeks, while their hardier, kin flaunt out their lives undanted. from on their fragile cheeks, while their hardier kin flaunt out their lives undaunted, in the face of sun, and wind, and shower. There are children whose blossom-like lives unclose, whose sweetness thrills us, and whose tender, serious, wistful ways fill us with vague forebodings—who faint, and fade, and die, while their sturdier playmates shout and dance, and grow away from child. shout and dance, and grow away from child-hood's freshness into sorrowful men and women. Such a child has caught the Artist's eye and been depicted by him as "One of the Chosen."

the Chosen."

A sweet oval face with long, light, waving hair, dropping loosely away from the low, wide forchead. The parted lips, the upward gase, the rapt, large look of the intense eyes, the folded hands, the inexpressibly beseeching, timid, pathetic grace of expression, touch us with an emotion too deep for tears. Overhead stretches God's sky and the influid heavens, into which the form tears. Overhead stretches God's sky and His influite heavens, into which the form seems floating away, away, beyond our reach. Perhaps God gave you a child once, to fill your heart with gladness and "make a sunshine in a shady place." A little girl with quiet, grave, unchildish ways, whose lip quivered at an ungentle tone or look, or even the cadence of a word—whom music seemed to rest and sunsets soothe. A child who shrank from plays and laughter, and chose rather to stray in unfrequented corners, and pore over old picture-books of Brownies, and Elves, and Fairy lore, or mayhap engravings of the Christ-child. Who came to your side at twilight, and caressed you with timid carnestness, and babbled of Heaven and the Angels, and speculated quaintly as to what Marnestness, and babbled of Heaven and the Angels, and speculated quaintly as to what the stars were, and what the flowers whispered to each other, until your soul grew wild with pain, and love, and foreboding, and you clasped her to your heart as though you would hold her there forever.

Presently you notice that the award see

Presently you notice that the sweet, serious face grows a little paler, the eyes larger and more spiritual, the light footsteps fainter. The tiny, fragile figure climbs to your arms now, instead of resting at your knee, for she is "so tired."

'so tired.'

"You watch, you agonize, you beseech you weary Heaven with your prayers, an still the child fades, fades beyond your ken still all that is left is a memory—the withered wreath that rested on her coffin lid, and a "low mound starred with daisies."

All—oh! sorrowing mother, is there not a hope beyond? Rest your wild heart, subdue your tears, and wear it as the crowning jewel of your life, that your child is "One of the Chosen."

Not for her the dusty highway, the toilsome stretch of years, the weary, unsatisfied heart of age—not for her the temptation, the defeat, the sorrow and self-scorn—not for her dead hopes, and buried joys, and rettless largeings restless lengings.

Borne away through short and flowery by paths she rests by the river of Life forever. And we who wait, and weep, and pray, thank God with rushing tears and breaking hearts for "One of His Chosen." H. B.

A linby's Solitoquy.

I am here. And, if this is what they call the world, I don't think much of it. It's a very flannelly world, and smells of paregoric awfully. It's a dreadful light world, too, and makes me blink, I tell you. And I don't know what to do with my hands; I think I'll dig my fists in my eyes. No, I won't. I'll scrabble at the corner of my blanket and chew it up, and then I'll holler; whatever happens, I'll holler. And the more paregoric they give me, the louder I'll yell. The old nurse puts the spoon in the corner of my mouth in a very uneasy way, and keeps of my mouth in a very uneasy way, and keeps tasting my milk herself all the white. She spilled souff in it last night, and when I hol-lered, she trotted me. That comes of being lered, she trotted me. That comes of being a two day's old baby. Never mind, when I'm a man, I'll pay her back good. There's a pin sticking in me now, and if I say a word about it, I'll be trotted or fed, and I would rather have catnip tea. I'll tell you who I am. I found out to-day. I heard folks say, "Hush, don't wake up Emmeline's baby," and I sumose that pretty, white faced wo-

and I suppose that pretty, white faced wo man over on the pillow is Emmeline. man over on the fillow is Emmeline.

No, I was mistaken, for a chap was in here just now, and wanted to see Bob's baby, and looked at me, and said I "was a funny little toad, and looked just like Bob." He smelt of cigars, and I'm not used to them. I wonder who cise I belong to? Yes, there's another one—that's "Ganma." Emmeline told as and she took we mu and held me arging. me, and she took me up and held me against her soft check and said, "It was baby, so it was." I declare I do who I do belong to; but I'll he belong to; but I'll holler, and maybe, I'll find out. mayle, I'll find out.

There comes Snuffy with catnip tea. The idea of giving babies catnip tea when they are crying for information! I'm going to sleep. I wonder if I don't look pretty red in the face? I wonder why my hands won't go where I want them to?

BROKEN HEARTS.

When other things are broken, they are no-thing worth, Unless it be to some old Jew or some repairer; hearts, the more they're bruised and broken here on earth,

In heaven are so much the costlier and the fairer. ** Mr. Speke (the English runaway) is said to be now in a private lunatic asylum, where he has been placed because he labors under the delusion that his family dislike him.

The city taxes of William B. Astoramount to $245,900. Mrs. Hopkins, a resident of Ironton, Ohio, now eighty four years of age, it is stated, has not drank any water for sixty years, using only such beverages as tea and coffee, and those moderately.

27 A woman astonished the worshippers in a church at Utica, N. Y., last Sunday week, by taking down her back hair and fixing it up again A portrait of the prudish Menken, The A portrait of the prudish Menach, taken in conjunction with the shy and modest Mr. Algernon Charles Swinburne, has been issued the by London Stereoscopic Company, and is the occasion of considerable comment.

On the 27th of March, Mr. Thomas Mantis, in his 54th year.

A LYMIC.

"Alas! how easily things go wrong,—
A sigh too much, or a kiss too long,
And there follows a mist and a weeping rain,
And life is never the same again.

Alas! how hardly things go right, Tis hard to watch in a summer night, For the sigh will come, and the kiss will stay, And the summer night is a winter day."

VENTILATION.—There has, of late, been much discussion as to the proper method of ventilating apartments, some requiring the opening to be at the bottom of the room, and others at the top. A recent author says both are right; that the noxious gases generated by respiration, by emanations from the body, and by combustions, are of two kinds—some, like carbenic acid, being heavier than air, and tending to settle towards the floor, others by rising to the ceiling. If, therefore, openings be made at both levels, these gases will flow out, especially if the fresh air be introduced through a register, intermediate between the two. In this, however, care must be taken to avoid a direct draft of incoming air on the body, which would, of course, tend to produce cold. VENTILATION. -There has, of late, been

BEST BOOK FOR EVERYBODY. - The new BEST BOOK FOR EVERYBODY.—The new illustrated edition of Webster's Dictionary, containing three thousand engravings, is the best book for everybody that the press has produced in the present century, and should be regarded as indispensable to the well-regulated home, reading-room, library, and place of business,—Golden Era.

Two anxious parents paid $150 for a special train from Portland to Boston recently, in order to visit a daughter who was dangerously ill.

Dr. Hadway's Pills (Coated) Are Infallible as a Purgative and Purifier of the Blood.

Bile in the Stomach can be suddenly climinated by one dose of the Pills say from four to six in number. When the Liver is in a torpid state, when species of scrid matter from the blood or a serous fluid should be overcome, nothing can be better than Radway's Regulating Pills. They give no unpleasant or unexpected shock to any portion of the gantly coated with gum. They contain nothing but purely vegetable properties, and are considered by high authority the best and finest purgative known. They are recommended for the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Nervous Diseases, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Bilionsness, Bilions Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, and symptoms resulting from Disorders of the Digestive Organs Price, 25 cts. per box. Sold by Druggists. mari6-cow-tf

ONE OUNCE OF GOLD will be given for every ounce ONE OFRICE OF GOLD will be given for every ounce of adulteration found in "B. T. Babbiti's Lion Coftee." This Coffee is roasted, ground and scaled "hermetically," under letters patent from the United States Government, All the "Aroma" is saved, and the Coffee presents a rich, glossy appearance. Every family should use it, as it is fifteen to twenty per cent. stronger than other pure "Coffee." can in every twenty contains a One Dollar Greenback. For sale everywhere. Henry C. Kellogg, Agent at Philadelphia. febm-ly

Ir PROFLE who suffer from the duil stapidity that meets us everywhere in spring, and too often in all seasons of the year, knew how quick it could be carred by taking AVER'S SARSAFARILLA to purge the hile from their systems, we should have better neighbors as well as clearer heads to deal with.

apt-3t

Moth Patches, Freckies and Tan. The only RELIABLE REMEDY for those snown

INCOLORATIONS On the face in " Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion." Prepared only by Dn. B. C. PERRY, Dermstologist, 49 Bond street, New York, 197 Sold everywhere. apl1-6m

Pressons of a nervous tendency are more liable to suffer from Neuralgia, Nerve ache and other painful nervous affections than from other diseases, therefore should not forget that in Dn. Tunsan's Tre Doutlockery or Universal Neuration Prix a sure remedy is to be found. Apothecaries have it. Principal Depot 120 Tremon Nt. Basilos, Mass. Price 11 per package: by mail, two postage stamps extra. Johnston, Holloway & Cowden, Agents, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hollowat's Ointhent.-Aethma and Quiney; rightful discases! exclaims the reader. We admit frightful diseases! exclaims the reader. We admit they were frightful thirty years ago, but Holloway's Ointment has disarmed them of their danger, by its use they can now be quickly and permantly cured; it never fails. Manufactory, 80 Maiden Lune, N. Y.

MARRIAGES.

Marriage notices must always be accompanied y a responsible name.

city.
On the 29th of March, by the Rev. M. D. Kurtz, Mr.
Alexander N. Yan Reer, of Del. county, Pa., to Miss Saman B. Hardes, of Burlington county, N. J.
On the 18th of March, by the Rev. Dr. Burdberger, Mr. Allen E. Shearre to Miss Sallie Schuyler, both of July city.

both of this city.
On the Moth of March, by the Rev. John McLeod,
Mr. Thomas Brown to Miss Elizabeth Henry. h of this city, n the let of March, by the Rev. Andw. Manchip, Francis E. Firencis to Mice Sanan H. Fireas, ghter of Mr. B. Freas, both of Chestnut Hill.

Philadelphia.
On the list of March, by Friends' ceremony, in presence of Mayor McMichael, HENRY TYSON, Jr. to ANANDA ALTHOUSE, both of Bucks county, Pa.

DEATHS.

Notices of Deaths must always be accompa-ded by a responsible name

On the list of March, Manuager, wife of Thomas largan, aged 48 years. On the list of March, David Walken, in his 19th On the 30th of March, Many J., wife of Wm. F. atterson, aged 21 years.
On the 27th of March, John Frincha, son of Baydi and Sussa M. Robinson, in his ziet year.
On the 27th of March, Mrs. Ann Parken, in her th year. Ou the 28th of March, Mr. Pacz. Bens, in his 61st

On the 28th of March, Connectes Conand, in his

NO STORY

(COC.)

SEARED.

Only a little wiser, perhaps, Yet somewhat saider too; 'Tis always sad to awake and find A pleasant dream untrue.

To find that lips had loved you well, But Heart stood coldly by, Nor recked that the white hand trembled so Or the lid of the well-taught eye.

Still she did all she had to do. I'll blame ber not, not I; She was merely acting Woman In the drama of A Lie

Yet 'tie from this part of Woman. That one all simple now, First learns to forget to be true in love. To smile at the broken vow!

Say then if he see it often played, Seems it so passing strange That a heartless love seems sweet enough. That he care not now to change?—

If heart be a thing so hard to find, That he rest from his search awhile, Content to be woosd by the brightest eye, Or to bask in the sunniest amile?

No, she must learn that a heart once seared Or dies in its cold, proud pain, Or is healed by the smile of as false as she,

she does all she has to do I'll blame her not, not 1: e is merely acting Woman In the drama of A Lie !

Delilah; or, My Whiskers.

Sir Thomas Winton and I are fellow-direct-Sir Thomas Winton and I are fellow-direct-ors of a Company which will never, I fear, make the fortunes of either of ms; but it pays its way—five per cent, on capital, the salaries of secretary, clerks, and porter, and the guinea-fees of the directors, are always punctually forthcoming. Now, it is a singu-lar fact, that however well off a man may be, a guinea always has an attraction for him, and Sir Thomas Winton when it town m; and Sir Thomas Winton, when in town, very regular in his attendance at the

The charms of general conversation are not unknown at those social business gather-ings, and Sir Thomas and I often discuss our be takes of nothing cise, and though not a system, you get it a once, without trouble or delay.

But I am anticipating. I have only just reached the house at present. Sir Thomas Winton was a widover, and his present family coasisted of two daughters, some where between eighteen and thirty, and a son in the Lancers, new at home on leave. There were several guests besides myself:

Captain Symour, a brother-efficer of young Winton's with a mere you asked with him, "Pailty" OBrian of the Foreign Office, a sort of social Crackino, and others. Of the fairer visitors, I need only mention one, Ada boart, for what man of sound mind could notice any other girl when she was in the room's Well, Captain Seymour could do so; but then he was infatuated and not of sound mind could notice any other girl when she was in the room's Well, Captain Seymour could do so; but then he was infatuated and not of sound mind could notice any other girl when she was in fatuated and not of sound mind could note any other girl when she was in the room's Well, Captain Seymour could do so; but then he was infatuated and not of sound mind could note any other girl when she was in fatuated and not of sound mind could note any other girl you cere saw. Suppose that, along with an active, lively tembers when them," added the other.

"Yes; there is a particularly fine contour, "Yes; there is a particular fairer visitors, I meed only mention one, Ada Dart, for what man of sound mind could notice any other girl when she was in the room. Well, Captain Seymour could do so; the then he was inflatuated and not of sound mind—suffering from younger Miss Winton on the brain, in fact. It surprised me very much to see the beautiful Ada sail into the drawing-room before dinner on the evening of my arrival. I had met her at a dinner-party and three balls; I had attended her with grateful humility throughout the whole of a picnic, and her image rose before me tather more often than I liked. It is very unpleasant to be haunted by a face; to see it whenever you snoke a quiet-solitary pipe; when you lean back and shut your eyes in a railway-carriage, when you are trying to get to sleep at night. I really do not know which is wors—to have a beautiful woman or a tune running in your head.

Off course I was not in that absurd state which the ancients style "cusmored," and the mederns "speony;" I am of my age, and despise romance. The man who loves any one but himself, or values anything more than hard cash, is an idiot, and I hope that I am free from such an extreme of weak. But to a certain sort of attraction, or the Wintons, and her unexpected presence looked quite like a fatality. If ever, when expecting to find yourself in the midst of you have discovered a familiar face atrangers, you have discovered a limited taking among them, you may remember what a pleasant revulsion it caused in your feeling, and how a mere acquaintanceship bore the look of intimate friendship by the contrast.

"What!" said I, "do you know the Win-

"Yes," she replied, looking rather asionished at my tone: "I have known them since I was quite a little thing; Sarah Win-since I was quite a little thing; Sarah Winton is my great ally."

Her reply showed an absurdity and an undue assumption of intinacy in my exclamation, which would have been very numbing to reflect upon in the presence of most ladies;
but Ada Dart was like the sun; it was impossible to feel cold or numb when she was shining on you; and she always shone; I do not believe she ever sumbbed a poor fellow to be life. She would laugh at him, indeed. in her life. She would laugh at him, indeed, on very slight provocation, but those who would have resented ridicule the sconest in any one clse, were never offended with Ada; no one ever frowned at her, or disliked her, or scolded her, or failed to pet and spoil her since she was first placed in the cradle, I be-since she was first placed in the cradle, I believe.

And a ridiculous proverb asserts that beauty is only skin deep! For she was beautiful; even other beauties acknowledged that. All they could do was to compare her with models of a totally distinct style, or to suggest that certain natural charms might be due to art. She was plump and white as a laby; each of her large hazel eyes had a distinct soul in it; where other mortals possessed knuckles, she had dimples; her ear was a flower, her— But I dare not dwell on her charms, so, pray, try to imagine them. It is an impossibility; but never mind—try. I could not remain long by her side; the room was full of strangers, with many of whom I had now to form acquaintance for the first time, even the ladies of the house being unknown to me. I was eventually paired off with a companion who was much interested in the Catholic revival, and evidently thought little of me after making the unfortunate discovery that I did not know what colored stole should be worn in ember-weeks.

"cowardly practice."

But I had my turn of being placed en rapport with the entrancing Ada. The fine old hall of Winton Park was to be our theatre, and it was my particular province to take the best advantage of the many natural fa-cilities of the place; to arrange about the scenery; to find out what were the proper dresses for the plays we were to perform, &c.; and Ada Dart being the only person whose counsel was of real service in a case of difficulty. I was perpendilly object to of difficulty, I was perpetually obliged to appeal to her. Dangerously intoxicating were those conferences, which, I confess, I prolonged needlessly; indeed, I used some-prolonged needlessly; indeed, I used some-times to get up a vexatious opposition to ber wishes, in order to give our discussion a matrimonial flavor. Heigh-bo! The plays selected were The Belle of Pen-zance, followed by the farce of Eyes and Nose; and the distribution of parts was a work for Job or Solomon, most of the com-pany at first deskrips their utter inability pany at first declaring their utter inability to take the simplest characters, and coming round gradually to demanding the principal reles. At our first general meeting, it really seemed doubtful whether it would be possible to cast the mildest and lightest of pieces in the British repertoire; but at the end of a fortnight, if Othello could have been rewritten with three Moors, four Desde monas, and two Iagos, our little company "had stemach for them all." When we ame to actual trial, however, the powers of ach performer got to be estimated by the thers at somewhere about their right value, and we settled into our places accordingly.

I was east for Fortesene, which was too prominent a part for my taste; for besides that, on principle, I very much prefer that other people should amuse me to reversing that proceeding, I hated having so much to that proceeding, I hated naving learn by heart.

That was another odd effect—we all seemed to have gone back to school. At every turn in the house or grounds, you would come upon a young lady or gentleman, with knitted brows, and eyes fixed on either earth or sky, muttering. "I say, Chevers, then me my part, like a good fellow," earth or sky, muttering. "I say, Chevers, just hear me my part, like a good fellow," Captain Seymour would say. Then a young lasly would make a similar request, and put

The charms of general conversation are positioned and continuous the conversal conversation are positioned as a positioned as a block. Me class which the positioned as a block where the conversal conversal fancy, or admiration, I must plead guilty.

Marriage is a state which is considered by many hard-headed practical men to have its advantages, and it did occur to me that if ever I tested them, it would be rather pleasant to a woodcock, forced me to own that there was a deep truth in the sant to do so in partnership with Ada Dart.

Thad no idea that she was acquainted with the Wiltows and her necessers.

But the way in which the odious Irishman beard how Ada hesitated, and seen how she blushed as she spoke, they would not wonder that my breath came short, and a singing arcse in my ears. My left hand closed upon the fingers which were forming that bridge; ingenious assertion so constantly repeated in the way in which the codious Irishman beard how Ada hesitated, and seen how she blushed as she spoke, they would not wonder that my breath came short, and a singing arcse in my ears. My left hand closed upon the fingers which were forming that bridge; in genious assertion so constantly repeated in the way in which the odious Irishman beard how Ada hesitated, and seen how she diushed as she spoke, they would not wonder that my breath came short, and a singing arcse in my ears. My left hand closed upon the fingers which were forming that bridge; in coverally necessary to the property of the way in which the odious Irishman beard how Ada hesitated, and seen how she diushed as she spoke, they would not wonder that my breath came short, and a singing arcse in my ears. My left hand closed upon the first my right arm stole round her form; I felt intoxicated by the magnetic halo which was fatal to a woodcock, forced me to won that it was a serious assertion so constantly repeated in the first my breath came short, and a singing arcset in my ears. der that my breath came short, and a singing arose in my ears. My left hand closed upon the fingers which were forming that bridge; my right arm stole round her form; I felt intoxicated by the magnetic halo which floated about her hair.

"Take care!" she said; "I cannot make y stroke if you come so close."

I knew there was such a thing as throwing way a race by making the running too early.

"Hit your owown b-b-b-ball in the exact untre, and rather high," I stammered, "and ou—you would not like O'Bri— that is, any other fellow to to-take that part, in fact "I declare I won't answer you!" she cried.
"Of course, I know you, and never saw most of the others before, and such things make all the difference, you know. To be kissed, even in the make-believe, by a man one has seen for the first time a week before, makes one feel nervous; but there!" Ecstasy! she classed O'Brian with the men "she had only known for a week!" Then she had not noticed him at all those parties.

And she had noticed and remembered me.

And she had noticed and remembered me. "Oh, that you knew me still better! Oh, hat it was not make-believe! Let us rehearse our parts."

"Where is the use," she murmured, "if you will not make a small sacrifice?" And she looked so deliciously shy and conscious, that I cried in rapture: "I'll do it!"

"What! part with these?" and she laid a finger more beautiful than Aurora's on one of my whiskers.

"Yes."

Yes,

"You must give me one as a memento. Get up; there's seme one coming!" It was Miss Winton and Captain Seymour, who came just in time to prevent a formal offer. I went off to my bedroom, locked the door, opened my dressing-case, took out seissors and razor, and began the dreadful task. Infatuated, mad that I was, I inserted the cpanded points of the fatal shears, gave a expanded points of the fatal shears, gave a convulsive clip, and in half a minute the carefully tended growth of years fell to the dressing-table. I cannot bear to recall how I looked at that moment. As quickly as was possible, I cut off the companion whisker, and then shaved my cheeks clean.

On my way down-stairs, I met Sir Thomas, who storped, stared, and asked my name.

who stopped, stared, and asked my name. He did not recognize me. Young Winton, who was always late, was breakfasting when I entered the morning-room. He dropped a cup of hot coffee over his knees, and nearly nice little sum all at her own disposition into the bargain. Whoop!" It was too true; he had stolen a march upon me. I left Winton two hours after-

Thank you; yes, my whiskers are gradually recovering, and I expect to be able to walk out by daylight in another month or se At present, they are in the blacking-brush

Thackeray said the drollest thing he heard while in this country, and the most characteristically American, was the remark "Oh, I have no objection hackeray. The only thing of a New Yorker to England, Mr. Thackeray. The only thing I should be afraid of would be to go out at night there, lest I might step off. Give your ive your son a trade, and you do him than by giving him a fortune. e and you do

Gen. Grant's reticence is at last accounted for. His fatl to school to a woman. His father says he never went

"Choosing a Wife."

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY ZIG.

"The world, tail foremost, will advance, Like Freedom in degenerate France, Will sidle, crawfish-fashion, out of night, And men grow blind by having too much light."

That isn't exactly what the ancient rhyme ration texactly what the ancient rayme says, but as I'm advancing in years, and losing my memory, and consequently can't recollect the third line of my quotation, I hope to be forgiven for interpolating a line of my own. That is to say, it is probably the bones of the original missing line, covered with a kind of cheapsholdy integrated from my own brains. I don't know ment from my own brains. ment from my own brains. I don't know whether it is or not.

That is neither here nor there, however, I only meant to hint, in my weak way, my Christian friends, that with all the onomies and ologies, the atomics and otomics, the nog, tog, and lographics of these days, in my opinion folks who write sometimes get their wits knocked into pi. I myself am troubled that way, frequently. So that the scribbling fraternity occasionally write articles which sound as though their authors had sat down in a muddy lane to write, and the whole procession of sciences had assed the whole procession of sciences had passed by, and each one in passing had given a jog to the elbow of each unhappy author's brains. Not to put it over-politely, they often write as though they were half-crazy.

It's an uncanny thing to know too much.

That was what I thought when I read that queerish piece—i-Choosing a Wife. Friends, upon my honor, it's the most ridiculous thing I ever saw in my life! It is unadulterated nonsense reduced to a science. What a muddle folks make of it when they undertake to the tell of her chiles when they all lengths. take to tell other folks whom they shall love and marry. Whenever people go to giving any of their blessed advice on that subject,

I always want to tell them: Please your impudence, I mean to marry the man I like best—if I can get him.

Notice this sentence, will you? "It is the height of selfishness, meanness, and cruelty, to take a woman to be only a sharer of your poverty."

cruelty, to take a woman to be only a sharer of your poverty."

Now, I'm an old maid. I always was an old maid. Moreover, I always expect to be one; but I somehow hold to a musty, ancient-fashioned notion that true love would not mind poverty. That a woman who really cared for her husband, would esteem it no hardship at all, but a happiness, to work for and with him, and that thus working, and even suffering sometimes together.

"Only handsome men and women ought to marry." (I wonder how many weddings there would be, now, if that rule were put into practice?) The authoress of "Choos-ing a Wife" better send up orders to the good God, that when He allows homely people to come into this world, He shall leave out of their composition all that human sym-pathy which makes them, just like other beloved. The Creator has seen fit to allow plain people exactly the same kind of joys and sorrows as He gives the handsome ones, but these scientific writers on matrimony know better than the good God, I

Moreover, there is a very old saying, wellnigh forgotten now, but one which all our grand-mothers used to tell us when we were little, that handsome is as handsome does. Also, it is so common as nearly to have passed into a proverb, that very handsome people, both men and women, are rather apt to be very vain and silly. The handsomest

SOO BOOK

Once I saw a certain "Dream Book and

It was worn and dirty because ervice. But it was still able to

Fortune Teller," dilapidated, thumbed and dog-eared. It was worn and dirty because of much service. But it was still able to give the "Signs for Detecting a Good Genius" with almost as much accuracy as the authoress of "Choosing a Wife."

It did not say that a man must not marry

woman with thin lips and a glib tongue

"A long nose denotes a vain mind."

"A long nose denotes a vain mind."

"A round and thin chin is not manly, but womanish; and with it signifies boldness and much pride."

the forehead; the party must beware of

"Beware of them who, when they speak twinkle their eyes, for they are double-suggestion to the gifted writes, in question She displays unquestionable talent in the

the old one is about used up; and then,-what a fortune might be made at it!

Just one more, friends, and then I promise to hold my tongue—till another time. Let him not commit the fatal mistake of marrying a flat, (what is that?) or a simpleton. Such women are harder to man

Manage! Manage a woman! Barmher-

SPRING THOUGHTS.

"Spring thoughts!" what are mine?— Thoughts of Earth awaking From her long sleep, and donning gay

cing,
Of scented shrubs, low bending o'er the mories! Backward ye lead me to familiar places;

dream;
With apron full of butter-cups and daisies,
A child, a little child again I seem!

A little child no longer, but a maiden, written.

are smitten.

A Very Rich Farm.

warning until I saw a vine pushing up from the ground and making for me. Then I ran as if for dear life, but before I got to the fence the vine caught me and began to wind around me like a snake. I was very much alarmed, and put my hand to my pocket for my jack-knife with which to cut myself loose; but to my horror I could not get in on account of a cucumber which hung there and which was growing like blazes!

It is recorded of the Bishop of Exeter, that when some younger and more excitable prelate wished that there were preachers in the Church of England as elo as Spurgeon, he dryly remarked shalt not covet thy neighbor's ass." It is better to encourage what is right than to punish what is wrong.

कि जिल्ल

Might a disinterested spectator offer s

When a crescent line passeth through ing this corner, I saw in the distance before me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, and found the light came from a large cham-ber or cave, hollowed out of the rock, and into which the passage lcd. The light was in the further end, where several small co-lored lamps were burning before a "joss-

LOVE'S GIFTS.

man I ever saw in my life, happened strangely to be also the most incorrigible blockhead I ever met. The only thing on earth that he was fit for, was to be a tailor's dummy. And if folks are all born with a mission, that was undoubtedly his.

Nature is full of compensations. She never lets one human being be a pattern of all beauty. If she give one a handsome face, she endows another with a brilliant intellect: she gives one a sweet, singing voice; I gave my love a fan before she knew

e eyes that I had given her first my heart. Mine gave her flowers-Nature's living gems; The likest things to her on earth I've

All beauty, grace, and sweetness; diadems
To bind her brows, and posies for her zone
O happy flowers, what had I given to lie, Like v ye, on that fair breast, though but to

O happy ring upon that hand to shine! lovely lady, would that hand were mine

My love gave mc—a kiss. O wanton air, I envy thee no more! O luckless flow! I breathe fresh life upon that bosom fair,

A NIGHT IN A TOMB;

to lie down, which I gladly obeyed. Some of the gang placed large stones against the entrance, so as to block it up; while others, passing through the inner doorway, brought out wood, and began making a fire; the dwarf fetching the pots and flat brass plates, and then several bage containing rice, dried fish, and the spices used in their curries. The rest lay down on their mats, and watched the overations. I did the same for some ed the operations. I did the same for some time; but at length, worn out by the ad-ventures of the night, and not relishing the dense smoke that rose from the cooking-place, I curled myself up, and fell into a

I must have slept some considerable time, for, when I awoke, the band were lying around me, most of them asleep; those who were not, sitting up on their mats, indulging in a few last whiffs from their bamboo pipes, were evidently shortly about to follow their example. The table was strewn with fragments of rice, broken bits of fish, and overturned drinking-cups. One man alone was alert, and he was leaning against the outer doorway, dressed, and evidently placed there as sentry. The table was between us, and it was only when I rose to a sitting position that I could see him. Next to me lay the chief, fast asleep.

brink;
Of mossy nests, of golden sunshine glancing,
Of floating clouds—oh, Spring! of these I think. chief, fast asleep.

They took no notice of my movements, and after sitting up a short time, and taking a good look round, I again lay down, though Oh, apple-blossoms wet with heavy showers.
Oh, fragrant breath of purple lilac trees,
Oh, blessed odors from Spring's early flowers.
How have ye stirred my slumbering me-Scenes long, long past, float by me as a rare occasions that our government interfered. Even supposing my friends were willing and able to pay the money, what guarantee had I of my life? To set me free, now that I had a knowledge of their retreat, would only be to endanger themselves, whereas my death would render all secure; and what faith could be placed in the honor of such rufflans? Again, should aid be sent, how long would it be ere it reached me, even supposing they succeeded in following my vague directions; and delay, I knew, would bring with it mutilation, which, even if I rate occasions that our government inter Quick fly the years, each Spring, with beauty laden, Is lost in Summer's riper fruits and Stands hopeful gazing on the speeding hours; And one by one the garlands, busy fingers Weave of the hopes that cluster round our prime, r and fall, till scarce a green spray lingers: Oh, dry and rustling leaves! oh, foot of

> What, then, was to be done?
> E-cape by the outer door was impossible.
> Even should I succeed in passing the sentry, > how could I hope to get clear away, weak and deficient in knowledge of the country as I was? and the inner door most probably led into the recesses of the tomb, from which there would be no exit. Still, this seemed my only chance. Might I not be able to conceal myself in some of its ramifications, or find a corner where a desperate man could defend himself till assistance came? I hardly dared breathe a hope of the possibility of a way out; yet such a thought continually came uppermost in my mind, and buoyed me up by its very hopelessness. In any case, to stop was mutilation, probably death; to go, could not be worse. Drowning men catch at straws, and no one who has not been in the like position can imagine the desperate clutching at the vaguest scheme desperate clutching at the vaguest scheme of escape which then presents itself. I de-termined, therefore, to lie still until all the men were asleep, and then to steal in and explore beyond the inner door.

So far, circumstances would favor my scheme. The opening was close beside me; I could place my hand upon its sides; and the table would prevent the sentry noticing tion as it was possible to feel, but despera-tion lent me strength, and I determined to ming in a drowsy, sing-song way; so I felt that as far as he was concerned, I was safe, and the thought gave me courage. I had to creep in some half-dozen yards before I felt I was secure from observation; then rising. I proceeded on my hands and knees, till a turn in the passage blocked up the cave I had left. The passage was narrow—not more than four feet in width, and about six feet high, so that I could just stand upright in it. Behind me, a faint light on the right hand wall showed the proximity of my enemies; ahead, all was darkness. Carefully picking my steps, I stele on. After going about a dozen yards, I came to turn at right angles with the way I was going, and passing this corner, I saw in the distance before me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light of the distance before a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light. I now pressed on quicker, me a faint light of the looky by the shoulders, I draw the first that the distance he fore the first that the distance are faint light of the body had cover it hat I had reached the further that I had the other a roll of papers.

glared from the gloaming sockets, Iaschusting me with their look, till I could almost believe I saw their rolling in ghastly triumph at my intrusion. The artists had by means of shadows, cunningly painted in, succeeded in giving their conception the most lifelike yet diabelical expression possible to imagine; indeed, considering the place in which it was, and the circumstances under which it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the coffin, wait-ing, I laid it down beside my trusty stick, and again seating myself on the sound-ing it was a supplied to wait it was a supplied to wait holding up the light, looked closer in. I now saw that the ribs of the skeleton formed a framework, bent outwards like the bars of a grate, and that within was a space large enough to admit of several persons standing; the framework stood slightly sjar, but there was a staple and hasp attached, evidently used at one time to fasten it. Looking still closer, I found that beneath the belly of the dragon. was a great opening, shaped something like an oven. I stepped in, and sounding with my stick overhead, found the roof was curved, and of metal; behind it several pipes, like those of an organ, ran up towards the back of the figure. This metal roof was corroded and blistered, as we see the was corroded and blistered, as we see the backs of our fireplaces at home, and the rocky sides were discolored, as if by the action of fire. This gave me a clue to the mystery. I remembered reading some account of how the Chinese in former days used to ofter up human victims on the death of any of their great men, most frequently choosing a barbarous death by fire; the sacrifice being made on some religious grounds, though more often prompted by the private passions of the priesthood. If such had ever been the case, the horrid apparatus before me was easily accounted for; and considering the place where it was, evidently the tomb for ages of some mighty family, I cannot think but that the conjecture was correct. Finding no outlet, I now turned back

Finding no outlet, I now turned back along the third side, retracing my steps to the opening I had come in by. This side was precisely like the other; long banners, decaying collins, and heaps of bones and debris. Like it, also, there was no opening or outlet.

When I reached the far end, I sat down

n a broken coffin close to the aperture, and gain thought over my position. Escape here was evidently none. This chamber bermed the limit of the tomb, far buried in formed the limit of the tomb, far buried in the mountain, set apart, from its remote and secure position, as the sepulchre of a race, and for the horrid ceremonies of their funeral rites, which, being against law and the prejudices of the people, could only be performed in the most secret places; hence the chain of caverns, the winding passages, and the last narrow and almost impassable tunnel.

One chance remained : the second opening I had seen was still unexplored, and as long as it was ro, so long did it offer a hope of scape—a poor one, a hopeless one, but the the only one, and therefore to be

Placing the lamp in the tunnel, I put my Flacing the tamp in the tinnet, I put my hands on the lower edge, and was just going to spring up, when a sound arrested my attention. Though I knew that all behind was sience, death, and decay, yet for a moment my heart stood still, and I gasped for breath; the next instant, the sound was repeated, and the reverberations echoed along the passage plainly told whence in came from. came from.

came from.

Blowing out the light, I placed my head in the entrance, and listened. Far back, I I could distinguish a tiny spot of light, marking where the second cavern was, and marking where the second cavern was, and from theenee the sounds came. Presently, the epot vanished, and again appeared, then went out again. Placing my car on the floor of the tunnel, I could hear a confused sound of voices calling out; and though I could distinguish nothing more than their low murmur, I had but little doubt that my absence had been discovered, and that the band were already in search of me. That they had me like a rat in a hole, was but too evident; that they knew it, was not so certain, the chances being that superstitious fears would prevent them examining further into the recesses of the tomb. At any-the fellows, and expected every moment to see the lamp poke out. I stood in the same place on the right side of the entrance, a little back, so as to have full play for my arm, and kept the stick raised above my head.

head.

This time they had changed their tactics, and kept their light behind them, so that I had to strain my eyes to watch for any approach. At length I saw something emerge slowly from the opening, like a man's head. Now was the time to strike. I took a steady aim, and let fly. Down came my stick; I felt a sharp shock in my arms, and it broke short off. They had shoved in a long bamboo, with a roll of cloth round the end of it, and the artiflee had disabled ms. The next boo, with a roil of cloth round the end of it, and the artifice had disabled me. The next instant, ere I could recover myself, a man jumped into the cave, turning sharp round, luckily to the left, to catch me; a second followed, then some more, but I never stopped to count them. With the mad impulse to escape, I rushed down the cuvern, now feebly lighted by the lamp one of them held, plunging blindly over the broken bones and heaps of rubbish towards the darkness. In the distance, behind me, I could dimly make out the forms of my assailants, now In the distance, behind me, I could dimly make out the forms of my assailants, now some dozen or more, already collecting for a search. Escape was impossible. I could see by their ficros gestures that they had discovered the body of the chief, and that instant death would be my lot should I fall into their hands. The events of a lifetime came crowding into my brain in those few minutes of despair. Never before had I been so near death; and to meet it alone in that awful seculciars surrounded by those that awful sepulchre, surrounded by those grinning skeletons, was terrible!
Suddenly, a thought seized me. I turned

Suddenly, a thought seized me. I turned towards the side, and felt along the rows of coffins for a whole one. Ere long, my hands came to one that seemed firm; I raised the lid, and tilted it up behind; then lifting my-self by the arms, I sprang into it. Something soft splashed up about me, and a cloud of small dust burst forth and nearly suffocated me; but I drew in my legs, and, stopping my mouth as well as I could, lay down at full length, and drew the cover over me. Fortunately, the weed was sound, or my hiding place would have been but of small use to me; as it was, I stood a good chance of being passed over unnoticed. There must have been many hundreds of coffins in the use to me; as it was, I stood a good chance of being passed over unnoticed. There must have been many bundreds of coffins in the place, and to pick out the one in which I was, would be a work of time; and time was my only hope now. My great fear was that the confounded dust would make me energy it was as pungent as sauff, and pervaded the whole place; my mouth and nose were full of it, and my eyes felt hot and smarting from the finer particles getting under my closed cyclids; but in a little time, after undergoing anguish in the effort to resist, the inclination passed off, and I lay in after unicercoing anguish in the effort to resist, the inclination passed off, and I lay in comparative comfort.

I could hear the fellows hunting about the upper end of the cave, hammering at the coffins, and jabbering excitedly. They were evidently making a strict search, and I could hardly hope to escape. By-and-by, the hammering sounded nearer, evidently drawing down towards where I was. I did not dare look out but I felt nearly extrain it came ther into the recesses of the tomb. At any-rate, where I was, I was tolerably safe, till on my elbows, pushing up the lid of the ther into the receives of the tomb. At any-rate, where I was, I was tolerably safe, till hunger should compet me to give in, or till help should arrive. True, I had only a bit of wood to defend myself with, but then only one man at a time cold pass through the tunnel, and by standing ready on one side, I should have a good blow at him ere he could get out. Hunger was my only fear; and help, if if it came at all, would be here in twenty-four hours at most. Turning over these thoughts in my mind, I grasped my stick and waited.

I had been leaning against the side for an hour or more, when a scratching noise in the tunnel roused me, and on looking down it I noticed that the light had considerably increased, so much so that I fancied I could distinguish the inequalities in the side of the rock. The scratching still went on, sounding quite loud and near when my head was in the tunnel. The cause was evident—the men were coming along the passage after me! Had there been any doubt, the next few minutes dispelled it; I plainly saw a small lamp, such as I had carried, alvancing along the tunnel; immediately behind it was a man's face.

C'utching my piece of wood, I stood on tilted forwards, allowing the skeleton within to slip partially out, and the white skull, still fixed to the trunk, grinned fearfully at man's face.

Clutching my piece of wood, I stood on ment, I felt sick and unable to go on, almost giving up my idea; but the thought of the ruffians behind me, and the fate they had in store for me, flashed across my mind, and firmly setting my teeth, I turned away from the hideous object, determined to proceed.

Turning to the left, I now walked slong the side of the vanit, avoiding the loose heaps of debris, housing away the gauly flags, when they swang back solemn and deathlike into their former places, and care impart: She took it with a smile; but saw not

O fan, how envied I the happy air Thou brought'st a-wooing to that face

lect; she gives one a sweet, singing voice; another, a beautiful hand; another, radiant eyes; another, and the best of all, perhaps, a pure heart, and a sprightly, loveable disposition. There is no beauty equal to that, position. There is no beauty equal to that, in the long run, madam.

"It is better to marry a full-sized woman than a little one, for the meanness of stature is apt to go through the character also."

What a whopper!

"A certain roundness of contour, a bright, uppish look, (what is that?) more of pride than vanity, &c., are outlines easily discriminated, and constitute a safe, reliable character." known !-

I gave my Love a ring. No costly prize;
Naught but a little simple hoop of gold.
She placed it on her finger with sweet sighs
And aweeter looks, that made my tongue more bold.

Where ye but perish in a few short hours. O ring, a finger thou dost clasp alone! My arms encircle all—for she is all mine

My Experience with Chinese Robbers.

PART II.

A mat was now spread for me, near the second opening, and signs were made for me to lie down, which I gladly obeyed. Some fortune-telling line; then why not go just one step farther, turn astrologoss, and "beat the world" by the publication of a new Dream Book and Fortune Teller? As I said, heavy sleep.

I must have slept some considerable time, of streams unlocked, of frozen furrows breaking,
Of tender leaf, of grain and grassy spire;
Of shadows on the lake's blue waters dana good look round, I again lay down, though not to sleep. Now the first excitement was over, I began to realize all the danger of my position: without doubt, I was in great peril. Murders were of almost daily occurrence, and the robbers who infested the country were known to be desperate and merciless; the local authorities were utterly powerless to quell them, and it was only on the occasions that our government interbring with it mutilation, which, even if I eventually escaped, would leave me a cripple, utterly unable to follow my profession. What, then, was to be done?

Spring thoughts!" Sad thoughts when backward all are tending. To early days, to promise unfulfilled; Spring thoughts; glad thoughts in heavenly beauty bending.

O'er days to come—o'er blossoms yet unchilled.

"Not dead but decreated." "Spring thoughts!" Sad thoughts when Not dead but sleepeth," so of Earth 'tis When all her glorious things are turned to dust:
"Not dead but sleepeth;" when our hearts spring-time is at hand-Believe and The narrator says: "I went over last summer with two friends, and Jones took for planting. We all went to the centre of the lot, and he there made a single hill, and he continued in the lot, and he there made a single hill, and he continued in the lot, and he there was a continued to the lot. snowed us a cucumber seed. Now, boys, said he, "when I put this seed into the ground you must run for the fence and get out as quick as you can. No sooner had he dropped the seed than he and the others started off as if a bull-dog had been after them. I was so surprised that I forgot the warning until I saw a vine pushing up from the table would prevent the sentry noticing my movements, as long as they were confined to a small area. On the other hand, I was weak and utterly defenceless. My clothes hung in shreds about me, just as the first robbers had left them; and altogether. I felt as unfit to attempt any active exertion as it was possible to feel, but desperative left they are strength and I determined to

I first looked about for a weapon, but though I saw plenty, both knives and jingals, they were either too far from me, or too much under the sentry's eye, to be available. The men who remained sitting up now slowly dropped off, rolling themselves in their oarse matting, and snoring lustify. When the last had lain down, and all was quiet, I cautiously wormed myself along the ground, and crawled into the opening. The sentry was leaning sideways against the other doorway, looking away from me, and was hum-

200 E

lored lamps were burning before a "joss-house;" two tawdry images, and a few plates of fruit and water, indicating its character. Round the cave—which must have been some fifty feet square—were piles of broken collins, placed here long before the robbers made the place their den. In one spot, they had been split into firewood, and lay piled in a heap ready for use; beside them were several lags, containing rice or other grain. several bags, containing rice or other grain. But the object that riveted my attention was the figure of the dwarf. He was squat-ting on the ground, with his back towards me, and leaning over a small opening; be-side him lay a small bag, into which he slow-ly dropped some pieces of money. So ab-sorbed was he in his occupation, that the slight noise I made in entering the cave had not disturbed him, and he continued clink ing the dollars one after another into the bag, swaying his body, and counting in the sing-song manner so peculiar to the East. The lamps shed a dim and almost painful light over the place, making it difficult to distinguish much more than its leading features, and for some little time I could see nothing but the broken coffins, the joss-house, and the dwarf; but presently, my cyes be-coming used to the darkness, I was able to make out two small square openings, about three feet from the ground, on either side of the cave. They were both about the same three feet from the ground, on the same size, perhaps four feet square, though the actual aperture was much less, owing to the rubbish that lay in them. To gain them, was my next thought; but how to do it, with that infernal dwarf in the way, puzzled me.

There was but one way open—it was his life or mine; and decision in such cases is easy. Picking up a piece of heavy wood, I crept up behind him, and measuring my aim, brought it down full on his bald head: a bright red 'streak started out across it as I struck, and he rolled backwards without a sign or motion. Undoing his waisthoud. I sign or motion. Undoing his waistband, I quickly tore it into strips, and made his legs and arms fast; then rolling up the rest, I thrust it into his mouth, binding his jaws as tightly as I could, by way of a gag, and then rolling him against the coffins, placed several so as to fide the body from any casual search that might be made. I did not stay to examine his treasure, which lay in several small bags at the bottom of the hole he had small bags at the bottom of the hole he had been seated near, and beside which was a small stream of dollars, that had poured out from the bag he was holding when I struck him, but merely contented myself with placing the latter in the excavation, and covering it with a loose board; and then all traces of the way I had taken being con-casted crossed the case towards the opencealed, crossed the cave towards the open ings. Taking a lamp from the joss-house, and carrying my stick, I made for that on the right. The rubble had fallen so thickly at first that I had to creep very cautiously on my hands and knees to get along at all. Further on, in places it had accumulated so much as to render progress almost impossible; but by working away with my piece of od, I managed to creep along a consider able distance. Unlike the other passages, this one ran straight, so that, on glancing back, I could just see the opening, and the light in the cavern I had left. light in the caver I had left.

I must have been crawling for nearly an hour, though I had not gone a hundred yards, when, on advancing my hand to feel for the next step, it only grasped empty space. Passing the light forward, I found I was on the extremity of a cavern of vast proportions, limited towards the sides, but in front, black undefined space. The floor was about three feet below me; so I stepped down, and poking up the lamp with a splinter of wood, I held it above my head, and looked around. I held it above my head, and looked around.

It was a strange and awful sight, and one that few have ever looked upon before. On either side, as far as my eye could penetrate, stretched the two lines of coffins, resting on y only chance. Might I not be able to meeal myself in some of its ramifications, of yellow flames. From the head of each coffin hung a long red flag, emblazoned with Chinese characters in black; many tattered and decayed, with slimy-looking cobwebs clinging to them; others fresh and bright, as if placed there yesterday. Comparatively few of the coffins were perfect; many were broken or decayed in parts, and some had crumbled away altogether, leaving only the context translated and park where they had been empty treaties to mark where they had been. On the floor, round the sides of the cave, lay a confused debris of crumbled wood and bones; here and there, a bone or skull, still undecayed, sticking out, in startling contrast to the dirt around it.

Where the fronts of the coffins had fallen away, the skeletons of their occupants could be dimly seen—some perfect, some headless, all more or less matilated. Out of one on the right, the whole side had fallen and the treatles slightly giving way, the collin had tilted forwards, allowing the skeleton within to slip partially out, and the white skull, still fixed to the trunk, grinned fearfully at and nostrils, almost suffocating me, and making my efforts every moment relax.

NO SON

Whichever way I turned, there was the dwarf's face, distorted with savage glee;
his eves glaring at me, red and lurid in the dim light. Already I heard the band coming his eyes glaring at me, red and lurid in the dim light. Already I heard the band coming up, in answer to the crics of the brute; faster and louder their footsteps resounded on the rocky floor. Nearer and brighter grow the lights, throwing out the figure of the dwarf as he clung round me with horrid clearness. Another moment, and they close over me; dewn they come in one confused mass, falling over each other in their mad eagerness to seize me. A dozon hands grappene, but the dwarf still holds on, as if unwilling to part with his revenge. Knives glean; clubs are raised; all hope and life seem vanishing in that fearful moment! My hands are fast to my sides; my bare face lies exposed to their murderous blows; my eyes close, and I clench my teeth in agony. The earth is beaten up by their mad fury, but the light is uncertain, and their aim is bed, so but few reach me. Now I feel a grasp on my throat; the hideous face of the dwarf is over mine; his hot breath scathes my own; his huge hands encircle my neek. Tighter and tighter they press: my head is bursting; the blood boils in my forehead, and surges over my brafu. Hideous noises fill my ears; strange yet familiar sounds are in the air. Above the horrid tunuit of the struggle they rise. I hear them closer now; they bear down every resistance. Air i air struggle they rise. I hear them closer now they bear down every resistance. Air! air! His fingers are pressing into my flesh; my brain is cracking. Help! Then came a great crash—a mingled tumult of shouts and yells. I feel strong arms tearing at my neck, but the demon dwarf clutches with terrible energy, and it seems as if the flesh will give way. Another tag, and his grasp relaxes; slowly and reluctantly, the fingers open; his hideous body is flung from me; and with a dull consciousness of relief, i sank to the earth.

any one. I heard voices near me, and could distinguish figures round me, but that was distinguish figures round me, but that was all. Gradually, however, they grew more distinct, and I made out the well-known dress of our men-of-war's men. Beside me, kneeling, was little Georgie Thompson, supporting my head, and dabbing my face with his handkerchief. Seeing I recognized him, he raised me up. "Just in time, Ned," said he, using his familiar name for me; "not many minutes to spare, I fancy. What a masty place yeu have got into, all amongst the doad men; a regular Davy Jones's locker ashere—"

"How did you come here, Georgie?" I said, interrupting him. "Are all the fellows caught?"

'Oh, they're safe enough," said Georgie "we've got most of them, and the lads are after the others; they are having a famous chase down there!" He pointed down the cave, from whence loud cries and shouts proceeded; the cheers and laughter of the proceeded; the cheers and laughter of the Jacks mingling with the cries of the robbers.

After a time, the men came back, crowding round me with wondering eyes at my kattered, dust-begrined form; then one of them, taking me in his arms as tenderly as an infant, hore me away towards the tunnel, the rest following. With some difficulty, I the rest following. With some difficulty, I was passed through the narrow passage, and through the two outer caves into the open

O, that glorious breath ! How I drank in O, that glorious breath; How I drain in the bright sunahine and cool refreshing breeze! It was like one rising from the dead, indeed. The long lines of hills undulating before me; the blue sky, dotted with fleecy clouds; and beyond, the tall mast-heads of the shipping—all came upon me as the awaking from a fearful dream, and with the excitement, I burst into tears. As we went towards the ship, Georgie, who walked beside me, related how my rescue

After I was struck down on the road, the After I was struck down on the road, the boy took to his heels; and dedging the ruffian who followed him, jumped up a tree that grew near, and from its branches watched the whole of the secue that took place. When the band moved off, he followed cautiously behind, marking the way as well as he could by breaking twigs, and also the stones on one another. In this manplacing stones on one another; in this man er he tracked the fellows to the cave. Day ner be tracked the fellows to the cave. Daylight breaking soon afterwards, to his delight he saw the shipping before him, not many miles away, the band having made a considerable circuit in their way. Keeping the mast heads before him, the boy made straight for Whampoa, over hill and valley, till in less than three hours he reached it.

a heavy sleep, troubled with fearful dreams, in which all the perils of the past twenty-four hours were enacted over and over again, their ships leaving they put me in his place, Georgie going with me as "third," his ac-ticles being just out. I have written this account by the desire of an old friend, to whom I related the cir-cumstances, and who declared it was quite worth printing. On his shoulders, there-fore, must rest the many faults and inaccuracies I have committed; my readers always remembering that Jack is more at home with a marline-spike than with a pen.

The Peculiar People."

A VISIT TO PASTOR BLUMBARDY'S ESTA-BLISHMENT IN GERMANY FOR CURING DISEASE BY PRAYER

BY WILLIAM GILBERT.

A man and his wife were lately tried at one of the London criminal courts, for man-slaughter. The charge was that they had neglected to secure proper medical advice for their child, an infant little more than a year old, when it was attacked by a mortal illness. Nothing could be urged against the previous character of either husband or wife respecting their own conduct or their affec-tion towards the child. On the contrary, they appeared to be a most inoffensive, hard-working couple, much respected by their friends and neighbors. Nor was there, apart from their neglecting to call in professional advice for the little sufferer, the slightest want of care proved against them. It was shown that they had attended to it with great solicitude. As far as their means great solicitude. As far as their means would allow (for the father was only a dock faborer, earning, when in full work, about fifteen shillings a week), they had provided every comfort—wine, arrowroot, and Indian every comfort—wine, arrowroot, and Indian corn flour—and had watched unremittingly. It appeared, however, that they belonged to a new religious sect calling themselves "The Peculiar People," one of whose tenets is that in cases of sickness they should rely solely on the mercy of the Almighty, and put no trust in any human aid whatever. The judge who presided at the trial summed up strongly in favor of the prisoners. He reminded the jury that peculiar religious opinions, such as those held by the prisonopinions, such as those held by the prison-ers, so far as they bore upon the idea of the direct interposition of Providence in the cure of disease, were by no means novel. In Roman Catholic countries especially, he said, it was a common practice to bring sick persons to certain shrines, and there, through the mediation of a particular saint, to im-plore the mercy of the Almighty, in the full hope that the prayers would be heard and the supplications granted. At the same time, while not seeking to limit the power of the Deity, he showed the jury the necessity of skilled human assistance, and illustrated his argument by adducing the case of a fracargument by adducing the case of a frac-tured limb, or a severe wound, which, with-out surgical aid and mechanical appliance, for not having obtained the assistance of a medical man, whereby the child's life might have been saved. In the autumn of last year my attention was directed to the subject of the treatment of disease by faith and prayer instead of by medicine; and I determined to visit some of the establishments on the Continent where the system is carried out. The institutions I selected were those of the Protestant paster, Christoph Blumhard, situated at Boll Bad, in the Black Forest, and that of the now-celchrated Dorothea Trudel in the vil-lage of Mannedorf, on the left bank of the Lake of Zurich.

would most probably result in death. The jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty," but accompanied it with censure of the parents

I first visited the Lutheran establishment,

judge, from personal investigation, of the effects of prayer and faith in the treatment of disease, and to ascertain whether his curva were as frequent and complete as his ad-mirers asserted. I also told him that it was possible I might publish the result of my observations if he would allow me, but that if he had the slightest objection, he might be certain that I would abstain from so doing. In reply, he assured me that I was at perfect liberty to do as I pleased in this respect. The house, the grounds, and every-thing connected with the establishment were perfectly open to my inspection, and every inquiry I chose to make, he assured me, should be candidly and truthfully answered. He could not grant me a longer interview at that time, because he said his guests were just about to assemble for morning prayers. In the afternoon, however, he should be happy to receive me in his study, and give me all the information I might wish. The servant then conducted me to a bedom neatly furnished, and extremely clean. I had searcely commenced to unpack my portmanteau when a bell rang, and another servant tapped at my door. On opening it, I was invited, on the part of the pastor, to attend service. I at once followed the girl, who conducted me into what was in every respect a commodious chapel, capable of confortably accommodating some four hadcomfortably accommodating some four huncontortably accommodating some four nun-dred people, although at the time there was only about one-third that number present. Not wishing to show my ignorance as to the form of procedure, I took a seat in such a position as to command a full view of the interior, and yet remain myself unseen. The whole service, with the exception of the singing was conducted by the pastor himsinging, was conducted by the pastor him-self, and appeared to resemble very much the form of worship in use among the English Congregationalists. The pastor certainly surprised me by his fluency and eloquence. Without the slightest attempt at oratorical display, his language was elegant and forci-ble. During the service three hymns were admirably sung; indeed, had the congrega-tion been professional singers they could scarcely have sung better. Although I was seated in a side back row, I could, to a cer-tain extent, command a front view of those present, including the pastor. The congregation seemed to me to consist exclusively of persons in a good position in society. Holding the opinion that every disease has to own peculiar expression of countenance, I narrowly watched the faces, so as, if possible, to ascertain the maladies with which the worthippers were afflicted. My attempt. the worshippers were afflicted. My attempt, however, was a failure. I did not see even one who appeared to be seriously unwell, though a large majority were evidently in delicate health, and in England would certainly have been under medical care. The women were much in excess of the men. I should say two-thirds were females and one-third males. All appeared sincerely degree. third males. All appeared sincerely devout, although there was no exuberant expression seat. To judge from their countenance although there was no exuberant expression of zeal. To judge from their countenances, they seemed perfectly resigned to the will of the Almighty, trusting to His mercy to restore them to health, yet perfectly willing to submit without murnur to whatever His will might be.

The service altogether lasted about an hour and a half, and when it was over I left the chapel unobserved and proceeded to my bedroom. I had hardly been there a quar ter of an hour before a bell rang, and the servant again came to my room to inform me that dinner was on the table. Although scarcely in appetite (it was then but little past noon), I followed the servant down-stairs and entered the dining-room, where I found the greater portion of the guests al-ready assembled. The room was large enough to accommodate between two hun-dred and three hundred people. There were light he saw the shipping before him, not many miles away, the hand having made a considerable circuit in their way. Keeping the mast-heads before him, the boy made that have bounts he reached it. Going to Elston, he told him in a few words what had occurred, and they both went on board the Abselia; and Captain Hamilton, immediately on hearing their account, sent off a boat's crea, under Georgie's guidance, to the research the tone who held how words the men carried him by turns; and at length, aided by his marks and directions, reached the cave, and attracted by the noise in the limer part, arrived there, as we have already seen.

There was quite a scene when I was extend the formally seen in the limer part, arrived there, as we have already seen.

There was quite a scene when I was extend and wish me joy of my escape, but I was stituted. I was almost in despair, when he ladds the part of a how yellow that the lads; the patter sample distriction, and a cross one at the top of the torm. I expected to the find the pastor's might be accommodate between two hundred and tree bundred people. There was was the to find the pastor's might be the was actually assigned to the torm it Expected to the top of the term. I had so much difficulty in finding it out, he was the words when him to the pastor's library, where he was waiting me. Having invited more to find the pastor is library, where he was waited more to be scated, he told me have two hears may question I might put to him. I find a soft the term, I had so much difficulty in finding it out, he was a large but the top of the term. I had so mean than not opposite to us any question I might put to him. I find a hear that he had formerly be a part of the torm. I expected to the told must refer the accordance of the town o

a single uneducated person, while many of the guests were not only well read, but highly accomplished; a proof that it is not the poor and ignorant only who have strong faith in the power of prayer for the cure of conversation during dinner tinued in the same agreeable tone for some time, when the pator's bell rang again, and the guests simultaneously rose up. He then gave out the two first verses of a hymn of the contract of t the guests simultaneously rose up. He then gave out the two first verses of a hymn of thanksgiving, which was sung by all, and he afterwards offered up a short prayer of gratitude for the meal partaken of. The guests then quitted the table.

My two lady acquaintances now asked me if I would like to visit the grounds, as if I wished it they would have much pleasure in conducting me over them. I accepted the invitation willingly. They first led me into some extensive and well-kept pleasuregrounds, between five and ten acres in extent. Conversation by no means flagged dutent. Conversation by no means flagged during our stroll, and I profited by the occasion to make many inquiries respecting the pastor's establishment, and his method of conducting it, all of which were answered with perfect frankness. To my remark that the pastor must be a man of considerable means, to have erected so fine a house and laid out his grounds in so expensive a man-ner, they told me that the house had not been built by him; that a few years before some mineral springs had been discovered in the neighborhood, which had the reputation of being efficacious in the cure of dis-eases; and that the house had then been built and the grounds laid out by some speculators. The enterprise, however, was a failure. Even the gambling tables which were started failed to attract visitors, the mineral springs almost entirely disappeared, and the whole place was rapidly falling into ruin when it was taken by Paster Blumbardt. An extraordinary metamorphosis now came over the whole locality, and the strictest order and decorum reigned in the house which was formerly noted for attributes of a very different character. The most singular change in the whole establishment was the transformation of the gambling and dancing saloon into the chapel. Respecting the cure of disease, my lady friends in-formed me that I was correct as to there tormed me that I was correct as to there being no persons at present in the house suffering under serious maladies, though all were more or less invalids. To my inquiries as to whether they had seen any cures performed, or observed any beneficial results ensue from the pastor's system, they assured me that during the time (some months) of their residence there had been some wonderful cases. During the previous six weeks derful cases. During the previous six weeks in fact, more than sixty persons had left the establishment either cured or sufficiently convalencent to allow them to pursue their ordinary avocations. To my question whether the pastor had any other patients than those I had seen in the chapel, they told me he had many, but that they were in different towns and villages in the neighborhood, and that he frequently visited them to pray with them, and that some of the cures he performed among them were remarkable. I inquired whether the numremarkable. I inquired whether the num-ber of guests resident in the house was or-dinarily as great as it was then, and they in-formed me that the number was much smaller than usual. There were only a hundred and twenty persons. The average number during the whole of the year they considered to be about one hundred and with a message that Pastor Blumbardt would be happy to see me in his study. Quitting my fair friends I followed the servant, and she conducted me into the pastor's library, where he was waiting me. Having invited me to be scated, he told me he was ready to answer any question I might put to him. I first asked him whether he denied the cfirst of medicine in the given of diseases. gen, he had carried on a very het and length-ened paper war with a certain Dr. De Va-lenti at Berne. On reading Paster Blum-hardt's defence of his principles (for he has published an octavo volume on the subject), addenly he stopain silence. He be paper; I for one connected dto release his with more than regal state over a great part of the empire, and whose name is even now tenerated and extelled. In the hole I had seen the dwarf near, was found a considerable sum of money and other property: contenance; and, from the remarks I heard who captured the gang, and a fine haul they made of it. Little George came in for his chare, the men insisting on share and share alike with the brave little fellow; and his best delight just now is spending it as fast asite came.

April 11, 1868.

The owners, on hearing the circumstances, were pleased to compliment me on the resolution I had shown; and the mate of one of their ships leaving, they put me in his place, for one personal investigation, of the figure of the day. Buddenly he stop-ped, and rang his bell to obtain allence. He though with greater difficulty, also joined. The conversation then turned on literature, especially English literature, with which I found not only the Lutheran pastors, but my fair neighbors, very well acquainted. In fact, the lady who had first spoken to me in English seemed so well versed in our literature, and spoke our language with so much fluency, that I began to suspect that she must have passed a considerable portion of the paper; I formate day who had first spoken to me in English seemed so well versed in our literature, with which I found not only the Lutheran pastors, but my fair neighbors, very well acquainted. In fact, the lady who had first spoken to me in English seemed so well versed in our literature, with which I found not only the Lutheran pastors, but my fair neighbors, very well acquainted. In fact, the lady who had first spoken to me in fact, the lady who had first spoken to me in leading the courted the paper of the day. Suddenly he stop-ped, and rang his bell to obtain allence. He then read out a portion of the paper; I formative with the brave sould be presented in our literature, with which I found not only the Lutheran pastors, but my fair neighbors, very well acquainted. In fact, the lady who had first spoken to me in lady readiness to press facts, or supposed facts, into the support of our favorite theories. About that time, as the reader may remember, a report reached England that the Abys-About that time, as the reader may remember, a report reached England that the Abyssinian captives had been released by King Theodore. The report found its way into many of the German papers, among others, into that which the pastor was reading. The intelligence of the liberation of the captives evidently caused genuine joy in the bosoms of all present. The pastor, noticing the satisfaction with which the intelligence was received, proceeded to impress upon us the power of Providence in changing the minds of despots, assuring us that doubtless in this case. He had worked a change in the heart of King Theodore, and inclined him to m rey, that the great effusion of blood which a war between England and Abyssinia would occasion, might be spared! After supper another hymn was sung, and the guests then separated for the night.

At six o'clock next morning the bell rang to rouse the guests, and at seven they assembled in the change or a short prayer.

At six o'clock next morning the bell rang to rouse the guests, and at seven they assembled in the chapel for a short prayer. Breakfast was then amounced, and the order of this meal was much the same as those I have already described. After breakfast I necompanied the lady who had so kindly acted as my guide the day before, into the reading-room, a part of the establishment I had not yet visited. It is a large, well-ventilated room, and simply furnished. On the tables there were numbers of different works, as well as many periodicals. Although there were no novels, or light works, the literature was not solely of a religious character. There were several French and German magazines and periodicals. Nor was England altogether unrepresented, for I found one or two copies of Good Words, and other periodicals which are proscribed by our "Pure Literature Society" as not being of a "safe" enough character. Possibly Pastor Blumbardt exercises a censorship on the literature of the establishment, but if so he Blumhardt exercises a consorship on the literature of the establishment, but if so, he is to be commended for the common-sense

The second day passed over in somewhat the same manner as the previous one, the guests amusing themselves by strolling in groups in the grounds and in the country round about. One singular fact is worthy of notice, as showing how little of religious allows there is in the paster's manner of of notice, as snowing now little of religious gloom there is in the pastor's manner of treating his patients. The conversation of the guests was by no means confined to Scriptural topics. On the contrary, politics, and especially literature, appeared to be sub-jects of great interest to both ladies and gentlemen; and the whole tone and manner of the society did not differ in any way from that generally maintained in any quiet mid-that generally maintained in any quiet mid-dle-class community in our own country. Next morning, before leaving the estab-lishment, I asked for my bill. To this the pastor at first objected, apparently wishing to treat me as his guest; but at length he complied. It was given me by his secretary, and was so moderate that I almost feared he had made an exception in my favor. But on remarking this to the secretary, I was assured that such was not the case, and that the charges were the same as those made to the patients. I must say it was with con-siderable regret that I left the amiable community congregated under Pastor Blum-hardt's roof at Boll Bad.

We have not space to more than refer to Dorothea Trudel's house for the mentally afflicted at Mannedorf, in the Canton of Zurich, Switzerland. Much success appears to have attended her system of considered to be about one hundred and sixty.

At this point we were interrupted in our conversation by a servant, who came to me with a message that Pastor Blumbardt would be happy to see me in his study. Quitting my fair friends I followed the servant, and she conducted me into the pastor's library, where he was waiting me. Having invited the reader to a little work entitled "Doro

There are some people who are so peculiarly constituted that matters the most harmless of the mass of mankind act upon them in the most distressing manner. For instance, some persons cannot eat a lobster salad without its having a very curious effect upon their complexion. We know a lady who once indulged at supper-time in a salad of this kind, and upon her return to the ball-room, her face and neck immediately became covered with spots, obliging her to retire. Cockles and shrimps have the like effect upon persons thus peculiarly constituted. A medical friend tells us that eating veal gives a lady of his acquaintance the nettle-rash, and that orange-peel has produced great nervous excitement. Figs, again, give rise in some people to what is termed "formication," or a sensation like the tickling movement of ants upon the palate. The most extraordinary example of the adverse influence of a common article of food upon the human stomach is related by a surgeon of one of our public hospitals. He says that a patient of his cannot touch rice without the most extreme discomfort. "On one occasion, when at a dinner-party, the felt the symptoms of rice-poisoning come He says that a patient of his cannot touch rice without the most extreme discomfort. On one occasion, when at a dinner-party, he felt the symptoms of rice-poisoning come on, and was, as usual, obliged to retire from the table, although he had not partaken of any dish ostensibly containing rice." It appeared, on investigation, that some white soup, with which he had commenced his dinner, had been thickened with ground rice." In an other case similar symptoms have come on after a gentleman had partaken of bottled beer; this apparently extraordinary fact was explained by the presence in the bottle of a few grains of rice, which had been placed there to excite a secondary fermentation. But what is this to the perverse stomach of a gentleman in a case cited by Dr. Prout, who was poisoned by eating a mutton chop? The most digestible of all flesh to the ordinary mortal, was to him positively as poisonous as though he had eaten toadstools. It was at first imagined by his physicians that his dislike to this kind of food arose from mere fancy, and in order to test him, mutton disguised, was served to him as other flesh-meat, but always with the same result—violent vomiting and diarrhora. Indeed, the effect upon him was so great, that, had he been kept upon a mutton diet, Dr. Prout believed he would have died.—Cassell's Magozine.

RATHER BITTER.—It might puzzle even an imaginative writer to concentrate in a few words more sneering but grieved bitterness than that expressed many years ago, during a temporary reign of the disease of "full" dressing now persistent, by a certain husband who was accosted with a question while looking on at a dance in which his very decollect wife was figuring.

"What very handsome and magnificently formed lady is that yonder in the green pearls?" asked one of the other guests, an acquaintance of the husband but stranger to his family.

"That? Oh, that is my wife; at least, I thought that it was, up to-day. But, by an imaginative writer to concentrate in a thought that it was, up to day. But, by the Prophet! I am inclined to think, by the way she dresses to night, that she is the wife of every gentleman in the room."— Northern Monthly.

W. S. Hutchings, of St. Louis, has invented a flying machine, with which he expects to navigate the air at his pleasure. He has a model completed, which works satisfactorily, and is now getting up a full-sized apparatus, which is to be twenty-eight feet in height, to weigh 285 pounds, and be capable of carrying 150 pounds. There is a caloric engine, on a new principle, attached; with a quantity of wings, large and small, operated by the engine, and all other arrangements to make the affair theoretically perfect. A parachute sixty-six feet in circumference, accompanies the machine. The inventor has so much faith in it that he proposes to make an ascension in a balloon at poses to make an ascension in a balloon at St. Louis, and jump out at the height of two

This with the greatest difficulty that I am able to separate policy from justice. Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any eminent departure from it, under any circumstances, lies un-der the suspicion of being no policy at all.—

"Many a man with a ruined constitution, and many a woman with shattered nerves, can trace back the beginning of their sor-row to those neglected childish days of theirs when nurses had it all their own way be-

One of the Musical Magazines con tains this month a Song called "Kissing her Hair." The following additional verse has been composed, in the event of an en-

"Kissing her Hair"—scented and glossy, Ah! well I remember my rapture,
At the ball where the talk had been
"hossy,"
The run and the ultimate capture:
Withdrawn from the lights and the whirl,

We had paused in the Tally-ho valse, When, my lips on the pendulous curl, She whispered—"You Silly, it's false."

One of the most wonderful cities in One of the most wonderful cities in the world is Bankok, the capital of Siam. On either side of the wide, majestic stream, moored in regular streets and alleys, extend-ing as far as the eye can reach, are upwards of 70,000 neat little houses, each house floating on a compact raft of bamboos; and the whole intermediate space of the river the whole intermediate space of the river is one dense mass of ships, junks, and boats of every conceivable shape, color and size. The iron greaves with which convicts' legs were formerly fettered, were obliged to be kept from the ground by a "sling" of "Male or female agents wanted in every town—small rope; the fetters thus became "slangs," and the vulgar but pithy phrases a CO., Biddeford, Mc. "slangs," and the vulgar but pithy phrases used by the slang-wearers was naturally called "slang-talk." So that youths ambitious to talk slang may know that they aspire to the language of felons. The last importation in England seems to be fresh from A byssinia, the term "Waagshum," meaning "a hoax." It has already started in the rounds of the press, which in its critical moments degree the state of the press, which in its critical moments degree the state of the press, which in its critical moments degree the state of the press. ments deprecates slang.

An Adventure of Malibran.

The following incident is told of Malibran, whose voice excited the most unromantic to folly:—She was resting in her dressing room to the control of the con whose voice excited the most unromantic to folly:—She was resting in her dressing room at the theatre, after singing Desdemons, her passionate soul still quivering with the emotion of the part, and the tears and applicate of her listeners. A person entered and begged her to go to her mother, who had been taken ill. A carriage (not her own) was at the door; she was whirled through the streets, and led, much to her surprise and fear, into a strange house, and to an exquisite boudeir. hung and carpeted with rosesite boudeir, hung and carpeted with rescoolered silk, where the beautiful songstress was left alone, after being assured by her attendants that her mother was well, that attendants that her mother was well, that the message was a cruel subterfuge, but that her captivity would only last while she sang the song of the "Saule." On a low seat lay a lyre such as that which thrilled in Malibran's fingers as she sang Desdemona's touching song. At first she determined to resist, but after a short time of ennus and anxiety, her mind reverted to the evening, and almost unconsciously she took up the instrument and sang the "Romance de Saule." As she concluded, sounds of enthusiastic applause and trembling accents of delight came to her through the silk hangings, and she was then conducted by liveried servants to her carriage and to her home. The next morning she found on her table a casket, containing a magnificent pair of earnings, and inside the cover, written in diamonds, was the word "Merci." But the event remained a mystery to her forever

A celebrated French preacher, in a sermon upon the duty of wives, said: "I see in this congregation a woman who has been guilty of disobedience to her husband, and in order to point her out I will fling my breviary at her head." He lifted his book, and every famely head. and every female head instantly ducked.

THE MARKETS

THE MARKETS.

FLOUR—The market has been moderately active. About 12,000 bbts sold at $8,909,90 for superfine; $90,00 for extra; $10,000,11,75 for low grade and fancy northwest extra family; $10,000,11,75 for low grade and fancy northwest extra family; $110,00,012,50 for Penna extra family; $110,13 for Ohio extra family, and $12,500,15 pbl for fancy brands, according to quality. Rye Flour—900 bbls sold at $9 pbl.

GRAIN—Prime Wheat continues scarce and in demand; $2,000 bus of red sold at $2,750,2.85 for common; $000 bus of red sold at $2,750,2.85 for common; $000 bus of Pelaware white at $3,10, and $1,000 bus sold in lots at $1,850,1.85 for Penna, and $1,800, bus sold in lots at $1,850,1.85 for Penna and $1,800, bus, $1,180,1,90. Oats—20,000 bus sold at $6,000 ke bus, the latter rate for prime light Penna and Delaware.

PROVISIONS—The market continues inactive.

bus the latter rate for prime light Feuna and Delaware.

PHOVISIONS—The market continues inactive. Sales of 600 bbs of Mess Pork at $25,50@26, and prime at $22. City packed Mess Beef is selling at $24,50@36, and prime at $22. City packed Mess Beef is selling at $24,50@36, and prime at $22. City packed Mess Beef is selling at $24,50@36, and Sales of plain and fancy canvased Hams at 17@19$c; Sides at 14$@15c; and Shoulders at 11$@51$c; bb. Green Mests—535 tes of pickled Hams sold at 166,16$c; and Shoulders at 11$@51$c; bb. B. at 17@20, and Regs in small lots at 17$c; bb. B. atter—sales of solid packed at 15@30c, and roll at 25@20c ab 15. according to quality. Cheese is selling at 15$@16c bb. Eggs sell at $10@36c ab doc.

COTTON—The market has been active. About 2500 bales usdddlings sold in lots at 27@25c bb for Uplands and 25@25%c bb for New Orleans.

FEATHERS—Sales of choice Western at 50@85c

B. SEBDS—Cloverseed has been dull; 1500 bus sold in lots at $9.50@7.75 for fair to prime Penna, and $8@8.25 bb bor good to choice Western.

PHILADELPHIA CATTLE MARKETS.

The supply of Beef Cattle during the past week amounted to about 1100 head. The prices realized from 1102.11% to by Bb. 200 Cove brought from $10 to 70 by head. Sheep—5000 head were disposed of at from 650 sets by Bb. 2500 Hogs sold at from $12,50 to 14,50 by 100 Bs.

GENTS WANTED FOR

The Official History of the War, Its Causes, Character, Conduct and Results. BY HON. ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS. Its ready sale, combined with an increased commis-sion, make it the best subscription book ever pub-lished.

One Agent in Easton, Pa., reports 72 subscribers in One Agent in Laston, Pa., reports at subscribers in three days.

Another in Boston, 102 subscribers in four days.
Send for circulars and see our terms, and a full de-scription of the work. Address NATIONAL PUB-Id-SHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa., or Cincinnati, Ohio.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for the new

"MEN OF OUR TIMES" Leading Patriots of the Day. An elegant octave clume, righly illustrated with 18 beautiful Steel En-

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

ents say it is the best, and sells the quickest of y book they ever sold. Some are taking 200 orders week. It will outsell "Uncle Tom's Cabin." We when nurses had it all their own way because mamma never looked below the surface, and was satisfied with what was said, instead of seeing for herself what was long full particulars. Address HARTFORD PUBLISHING CO., Hartford, Conn. api1-4t

BOOK AGENTS WANTED

For a new, splendidly illustrated, and very popular book, of special value and interest to everybod gaged in commerce or trade. As everybody wants to become successful in business, or wh sires to learn all about the famous merchants of world, will want to buy this work, agents will find it a very popular and easy book to canvass for. Liberal terms and exclusive territory given. Address, at once, D. APPLETON & CO., Publishers, New York, tor

BOOK AGENTS WANTED

For "BOYNTON'S HISTORY OF THE NAVY DURING THE REBELLION," a magnificent and DURING THE REBELLION, a magnificent very popular work, now just completed. It perbly illustrated with numerous engravings or and wood, and with views printed by a new printed in colors. and wood, and with views printed by a new process in colors. It is a history of a portion of the recent war not hitherto specially treated, and has the full indorsement of the Hon, Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy. It is a truly splendid and valuable work, and good agents are wanted to canvass for it, in all parts of the country. Address D. APPLETON & CO., Publishers, New York, for terms and particulars.

$25 PER DAY. Agents wanted, Male and Fravelling. Business new. Steady employment. No capital required. Address REEVES & CO. 25 Nassau St., New York. jy6-1j

ONE OF THE CHOSEN."

This Beautiful Engraving

SARTAIN

FROM A PAINTING

BY GUY,

(PRINTED ON A SHEET 19X24 INCHES) ISAGEM.

And should be in the possession of every one who appreciates fine Engravings.

Por particular description we refer to a notice in another column of this paper. It is sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of the price, only $1.75.

BRADLEY & CO., Publishers, 66 NORTH 4th St., PHILADELPHIA.

N. B.—We publish over 30 Fine Steel Plates varying in price from One to Ten Dollars. Send for List.

AGENTS WANTED

"PENN LETTER BOOK." A new Method of Copying Letters without either press or water, thereby saving time, labor, and expense, and enabling thousands to copy their letters who had not previously been able to do so, as the price brings it within the reach of all. Any child can work it. Full directions accompany each book, it recommends itself wherever shown, and sells rapidly.

rapidly.

Send for full descriptive circulars, and testimonials from many of our leading men. We want an energetic, intelligent Agent in every County to control this valuable invention. Address PENN MANUFACTURING WORKS-Principal Office 702 Chestnut St., Philadelphia. ap 4-21.

Cheap Guns, Revolvers, &c., for the People.

Double Barrel Shot Guns warranted Wrought Iron
Double Barrel Shot Guns warranted Steel Twist 16.09
Boy's Single " Wrought Iron 3.09
Meu's " " Imitation Twist 4.00
Smooth Bore Muskets, Brass Mounted, good; as new; warranted to shoot shot close and kill at 60 yards
Pocket Revolvers, 5 shooters for powder and ball (new) 10.00
Pocket Revolvers, 6 shooters, and 100 metal cartridges

Pocket Revolvers, 6 shooters, and 100 metal 10.00 Water proof Caps 80 cts. per hundred. Patch Cutters 20 cts. Liberal discount to dealers or clubs. Cash paid for Spencer's, Henry's and Sharpe's Riffses, and Colt Army or Navy Revolvers. Remit money by postal orders or registered letters. Agents wanted in every city and town in the United States to sell three useful articles used by everybody. Send stamp for circulars, etc. Address J. H. JOHNSON, Great Western Gun Works, 170 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.

ESTEY'S COTTAGE ORGANS FINEST TONE,

POWER, to buy them that any other INSTRUMENT in the market Great inducements offered to Sun-day-schools and churches. A libe-ral discount made to cleaves.

E. M. BRUCE.

18 North Seventh St

Petersburg, Virginia, Real Estate Agency. FRANKLIN WOOD.

Notary Public, No. 51 Sycamore Street, Petersburg, Virginia.

FARM LANDS! FARM LANDS!

I have for sale some of the most desirable tracts of and in this section of Virginia, at prices to insure I have for sale some of the most desirable tracts of land in this section of Virginia, at prices to insure to the purchasers profitable investments. For men of limited means this is an opportunity to acquire a homestead convenient to market, and in one of the best arrentlural districts of our country—nequalled; while capitalists, by purchasing at the low figures at which these lands are now held, will, in a very few years, find them doubled in value.

Investments made, titles examined, &c. All communications receive prompt attaction. mar21-4t

MATERIA MUSICA. Materials for the Pianist; a Class Book containing the Principles of Music applied to Pianoforte Play-ing, adapted for private tuition, but more especially arranged for the use of schools for young ladies' normal schools, and other seminaries of learning. By J. C. Engelbrecht. Just published. Price 75 cts. Mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Publishers, 277 Washington Street, Boston. CHARLES H. DITSON & CO., 711 Broadway, New York.

AGENTS, AGENTS, AGENTS Are making from $10 to $50 a day selling our Improved and Perfected Common Scane $29 Family Sewing Machine. Address C. L. SIMONDS & Co., Manufacturers, Orange, Mass.

TO FIDDLERS.

I have a new soundpost that will make any violin sound loader and awester. No patent. Any person sending me one dollar will receive full description. Address J. S. MOORHEAD, Tonica Station, Blinels, Central Railroad.

A GENTS WANTED.—"MAGIC DRAWING LED. Picture business. Very profitable, No risk, Seventeen specimen Picture and Catalogues sent for A. BARBER & BRO., Port Byron, Illinois.

A. Port Byron, Illinois.

A. BARBER & BRO., Port Byron, Illinois.

Rates of Advertising.

Thirty cents a line for the first insertion. Twenty cents for each additional insertion. Payment is required in advance.

(Established 1861.)

THE GREAT AMERICAN

Tea Company

HAVE JUST RECEIVED TWO FULL CARGOES OF THE FINEST NEW CROP TEAS.

99,000 HALF CHESTS by ship Golden State

In addition to these large eargues of Black and Japan Fean, the thompson are constantly resorting large in voices of the majority and the Mills of the second quality of fire or Court in the Mills pane distributed and pane, which are convexient for the near and decompt flavor, which they are selling at the following process. following prices: LANG (Black), Sto., Sto., Tho., Sto., 100., best $1 MIXED (Green and Black), 50c., 60c., 70c., 80c., 80c., 10c., GUNPOWDER. $125, best $1 50 W D.

Coffees Roasted and Ground Daily. GROUND COFFEE, 200, 250, 300, 300, but 400 por the Hotels, Saicona, Hourting house knepers, and Fa milies who use large quantities of Coffee, on a concentrate in that seriode by weng our FRENCH HHEAK-FAST and DINNER COFFEE, which we sell at the low price of 300, per pound, and warrant to give perfect activation. Strength of the strength of th

GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,

Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY STREET. Post-office Box, 8648 New York City.

We warrant all the goods we sell to give entire satis faction. If they are not satisfactory they can be returned at our expense within 30 days, and have the memor refunded.

Throughour system of supplying this throughout the country, consumers in all parts of the United States can (see even their Pean at the same prices (with the small additional expense of transportation) as though the small additional expense of transportation is a though the small additional expense of transportation is a though the small additional expense of the same particle of the same particle at our welcomes in this city. Some particle at our welcomes in this city, and the same particle at our welcomes in this city, as only the same particle at our particle and the same particle and supply the test of the particle and the same and the sa

N. B.—All villages and towns where a large number reade, by clubbing together, one reduce the oast of their tens and Codess atout one-third thesise was the Kr. American Trea Company of the Greak American Trea Company of the description. The Greak American Trea Company of the description of the Greak American Trea Company of the description of the Greak American Trea Company, as they are house or reactations. We have no transfer, and do not, in any case, autionized the are of our name of the Greak and de not, in any case, autionized the order of Treat Greak and descriptions of the Greak and descriptions of the Greak and descriptions.

GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMP'Y, Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY ST.,

NEW YORK.

Post office Hox, 5643 New York City.

THE SECOND SUSSION OF LECTURES T in the PHILADELPHIA UNIVERSITY OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY commences Jan. 1st, MEDICINE AND SURGERY commences Jan. 1st, 1868. Located, NINTH AND LOCUST.—The above Institution has beer thoroughly reorganized, and holds four sessions of lectures each year, embracing ten months of medical instruction. Under the new organization students can enter the College at any time during its sees-ion. No previous medical study is required, as all branches of medicine are taught. It has an able corps of professors and teachers, thus furnishing facilities for a regular and thorough medical and surgical education. Perpetual scholarship to the University $75 for first course, and $50 for second course students. W. PAINE, M. D., Deau, nov20-6m UNIVERSITY BUILDING, Philada.

Husband's Calcined Magnesia

is free from unpicasant taste, and three times the strength of the common Calcined Magnesia.

The N. Y. World's Fair Medal and four First Premium Silver Medals have been awarded it, as being the best in the market. For sale by the druggists and country storeke-pers, and by the manufacturer.

THOMAS J. HUSBAND, Philadelphia.

marge.201

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

AND

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

BY A REPUBLICAN (not a "Radical.")

This is a 12mo., containing 118 pages, and is devoted to a calm and moderate discussion of the Suffrage Question—the author contending that the Suffrage should be Qualified, and not Unqualified and Universal.

Universal.

Reasons are given against Universal Negro Suffrage, and also against Fermale Suffrage.

The work will be forwarded by mail (postage prepaid) on the receipt of the price, 50 cents, by the publishers,

J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO., 1915-14 No. 713 Market St., Fhiladelphia.

TRUE, BUT STRANGE.—Any person send-ing as their address, with 20 cents, will receive, by mail, the Name and Carte de Visite of their fature Wife or Hasband. REEVES & CO., 78 Nasau St., New York.

THIS IS NO HUMBUGI By sending

THE

Berkshire Life Insurance Co.,

PITTSFIELD, MASS.,

Offers SERATER ADVANTAGES to Policy holders than say company in this country.

INCORPORATED A. D. 1651. CHARTER PREPETUAL. T. F. PLUNKETT, President. BHNJ. CHICKERING, Secretary.

JACOB L. GREENE, Asst. Sec'y. Assets . . . . . $1,000,000 Annual Income . . . . 500,000

Dividends paid annually, on the Contribution Plan, rom 39 to 50 per cent.
All the profits are divided among the Policy-holders. Dividends paid to Policy-holders this year $\frac{1}{2}\text{it}$, $\sqrt{\text{D}}$. The BERKSHINE was the riner Company in the inted States to make ALL of its Policies NON-FORFEITABLE.

Every Policy issued by this Company since April, t. D. 1861, is non-porrestrants, and so expressed in the Policy.

the Folicy.

An Annual Payment Life Policy is not forfeited by fallure to pay Premium when due, but it is continued in force under the Massachusetts Law of April, 1861.

EXAMPLE AT AGE 35.

EXAMPLE AT AGE 35.

One annual payment will continue the policy in force two years and three days.

Two annual payments will continue the policy in force four years and twelve days.

Three annual payments will continue the policy in force six years and twenty-seven days.

Four annual payments will continue the policy in force eight years and forty-six days.

Five annual payments will continue the policy in force to years and fifty-six days.

Sia annual payments will continue the policy in force twelve years and forty-one days.

Ninctorn annual payments will continue the policy in force thirty years and fol days.

All Endowment and Limited Payment Life Policies are entitled to a "PAID-UP NOS-PORPRITABLE POLICY," after one Annual Premium has been paid.

W. M. Annual Premium has been paid.

W. HARRY MILLER, Special Agent.

W. H. SMITH, M. D., Medical Examener, feb8-iy SIA-SPRUCKSE, Philadelphia, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED.

DR. B. FRANK. PALMER, PRES A.A.LINE C1

These inventions stand approved as the "best" by the most eminent Scientific and Surgical Societies of the world, the inventor having been honored with the award of FIFTY GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS (or "FIFST VIZES"), including the GREAT MEDALS of the WORLD'S EXHIBITIONS IN LONDON AND NEW YORK; also the most Honorary Report of the great SOCIETY OF SURGEONS OF PARIS, giving his Falents place above the ENGLISH and FRENCH.

the ENGLISH and FüENCH.

Dr. PALMER gives pursonal attention to the business of his profession, aided by men of the best qualifications and greatest experience. He is specially commissioned by the GOVERNMENT, and has the patronage of the prominent OFFICERS of the ARMY and NAVY. SIX MAGOIGEGENERALS and more than a thousand less distinguished officers and soliders have worn the PALMER LIMISS on active duty, while still greater numbers of eminent civilians are, by their aid, tilling important positions, and effectually conceal their insfertners.

All Genuine "PALMER LIMISS" have the name of the inventor affixed.

Pamphiets, which contain the New Rules for name of the inventor affixed.

Famphiets, which contain the New Evice for Amphietions, and full information for persons in want of limbs, sent free to applicants, by mail or otherwise.

The attention of Surgeons, Physicians, and all persons interested, is most respectfully solicited.

The well-known LINCOLN ARM is also made solely by this Company. This Arm has the patronage of the U. B. GOVERNMENT.

To synd the imposition of PLESTON.

To avoid the imposition of PIRATICAL COPY-ISTS, apply only to Da. PALMER, as above directed, octably

BELLS. TROY BELL FOUNDRY.

CHURCH BELLS, Chimes and Rells of all Sizes for Churches, Pactories, Academies, Steamboots, Plantacions, Loos-

Mado of Pure Beli Metal, HUNG WITH PATENT ROTART MOUNTINGS, THE REST IN U.S. FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS & CO., Trav. N. 7

jury) in soft fururiant, beautiful flowing curis.
Address, with stamp, Frof. B. H. ROBB, Parkman, pauls-am

THE BOWEN MICROSCOPE,

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 CENTS. THERE for $1.60. Address F. P. BOWEN, del7-tf Box 220, Boston, Mass.

FREE GIFTS TO ALL! A Silk Dress Pattern, a Family Sewing Machine, or Gold Watch. FREE OF COST! For one or two days' service in any town or village.

Particulars and samples sent free, by addressing.

with stamp,

N. B. CLOUDMAN & CO., with stamp, N. B. CLOUDMAN & CO., jan25-3m No. 40 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

$100 A MONTH SALARY will be paid for e sample retailing at $4.50 for 10 cts.

BOWMAN & CO., 48 Broad St., New York, out and return this notice.

12b15 3m

$30,000 FOR A FORTUNE Every Young addressing WOOD & CO, Vernou, N. Jersey, fes-1ft

WIT AND HUMOR.

Afraid of his Enra.

At a social recently, a noted wag found himself, in the course of the evening, in general conversation with a nervous looking himself, in the course of the evening, in general conversation with a nervous looking stranger. Pointing out to him a gentleman of an inquiring turn of mind in another portion of the room, he said: "Do you see that man there? He has a mania—a very unpleasant one, too. He is possessed with the idea that he must hite off stranger's ears, and it has caused a dwadful amount of trouble. I do not know whether he will show any of the symptoms to-night, but perceiving you are a stranger, I deem it my duty to put you on your guard. Don't let him approach very close to you." The expression of horror that spread over the face of the nervous man clearly proved that he heard the warning. A little later the benevolent informant got opportunity to tell the inquiring man that that man (pointing out the warned individual) was a physicial wonder, as a roaring noise could be distinctly heard proceeding from his car by getting within eighteen inches of his car. Our curious friend was struck with such an unheard-of phenomenon, and very properly began to work himself close enough for a personal investigation. The movement was seen by the nervous man, and great drops of apprehensive sweat coxed out from his brow and trickled down his cheeks, Nearer and nearer annroached the one, and more terribly inhensive sweat coned out from his brow and trickled down his cheeks. Nearer and nearer approached the one, and more terribly intense grew the horror of the other. The space between them was slowly but surely lessening. The curious man was within an acc of the "roaring," when the agony of the "roarer" reached its crisis, and clenching his fist, he landed it between the "lookers" of the unfortunate searcher after physical wonders, shouting at the top of his voice: wonders, shouting at the top of his voice;
"Bite off my ears, will you?" The effect of this on the astonished audience was very

A Successful Hurgier Trap.

A cotemporary tells, or rather lets the hero of the incident tell, of a German watch maker in this city who, hearing of the frequent burglaries, concluded to fortify his store against the gentry who work with skeleton keys and crowbars. The watchmaker said:

"I hear much tings apout te purglars all a while; I hears they breaks stores into 'emvery much. Vell, I tinks I vixes 'em, so that the next time that they coomes to my stores, by tam, they no gum. I puys a pig horse bistel, and I fastens it to de floor, middle mounts protein; to de door. So den I. de mooale pointin' to de door. So den I runs a string from de drigger up mit der vall and down mit der door, so ven Mr. Punglar opens hinself mit der door, vy, if he plose de tam prains out of de bistel, vy, den you With azure and with jet;

EMBARRASSING QUESTION.

PET,- "Ma, mightn't the big man let me have his 'starchers' for a new tail for my

THE CONTRAST.

My heart is gone, I own;
A black one sets it all on fire—
A blue one melts it down.
There's lightning in the black one's giance.
A sunbeam in the blue;
One strikes it like a piercing lance.

By fire or water, then, it goes-But which I'm yet to learn -At morn it burns, at night it flows,

And flames and weeps by turn. One piercer or one meiter I Could face and never quake;

and the same that one on the Section of the Section

The Art of Not Hearing.

The art of not hearing is fully as impor-tant to domestic happiness as a cultivated ear, for which so much money and time is expended. There are so many things which it is painful to hear, many of which if heard will disturb the temper, and detract from contentment and happiness, that every one should be educated to take in or shut out

"A Fresh Blast from an Old Bel-quick, nervous manner, "very well; but sumptive evidence of the moon's habita-don't let it happen ny nin ?"

AGRICULTURAL.

To Keep Sunny Banks Green.

The south slope is often so hot and dry in summer, that by the end of June it always turns brown, by the middle of July is quite brown, and thence to the end of September brown, and thence to the end of September unsightly. The soil also is often quite sandy and poor, so there are two obstacles to the growth of grass. Now I can face that slope with as bright green grass-like herbage as can be found in the world, and I advise that it be planted with camomile and common yarrow. As vulgar names are not to be trusted, I wish it to be understood that the amomile I mean is the Anthemis nobilis, nd the yarrow is to be Achilles millefolium. These may be mown like grass, and will con-tinually spring again from the root; but the wise gardener will never mow hot, dry banks and slopes very close, or very frequently, for in such places herbage lives in summer chiefly on dew, and if closely shaven there are not sufficient condensers of dew as when there is some amount of leafage surface to attract and collect the watery particles.—Gardener's Magazine.

A Sensible Speech.

At the close of a Fair in North Carolina a Virginia farmer, Mr. Mott, made the fol-

"I have a man in my eye, who, when Richmond fell, had due him but $50. He rented a farm for $100, and bought a mule for $400; and the first year he made $1,500, hiring no other labor than was necessary for cutting threshing, and getting up his wheat. He now cultivates about one hundred acres, and has sold $3,000 worth of wheat, having almost paid his rent in raising vegehaving almost paid his rent in raising vege-tables, &c., &c.; and his profits are between $2,000 and $2,500. How ridiculous for our young men to go about with long faces, com-plaining of having nothing to do? When Richmond fell, Mr. President, I was fifty years old, and had been delicate all my life; I went into the field and ploughed regularly, and made a good crop and fed regularly, and made a good crop, and fed my family. And now for a young man to say he 'can't work,' it's a shame—a burning shame!"

Agricultural Items.

If a man falls into a violent passion and calls me all manner of names, the first word shuts my ears, and I hear no mere. If in my quiet veyage of life I am caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, I shut my eyes, as a sailor would furl his sails, and, making all tight, seud before the gale. If a hot and restless man begins to inflame my feelings, I consider what mischief these sparks might do in the magazine below, where my temper is kept, and instantly close the door.

Does a gadding, mischief-making fellow begin to inform me what people are saying legion to inform me what people are saying legion to inform me what people are saying legion to inform of the chickens, which —POULTRY.—The public has yet to learn the full advantages of keeping poultry. Few seem to appreciate the service they may do top. As soon as the upper portion is fixed, send it to table; or, the omelet being fried, spread the preserve on it and roll it.

THE RIBBLER.

. Enigma.

I am composed of 69 letters. My 34, 1, 17, 14, 65, 52, 59, 33, was a battle. My 49, 8, 2, 52, 12, 9, 3, 62, is a city in France. My 17, 9, 16, 30, 19, is a fish.

My 6, 61, 60, 67, is a bird disliked by many. My 47, 48, 27, 66, 10, 38, 16, 17, 55, 62, 58, 9, 58, is a flower. My 5, 58, 13, 64, 57, 7, 46, 52, signifies royal.

My 11, 53, 36, 4, is a musical instrument.

My 64, 18, 56, 32, 52, 22, 58, 1, 31, 30, 29,

was a ruler of the Franks.

My 58, 38, 65, 39, 15, 16, 52, 9, 49, 40, 45,

My 58, 38, 65, 39, 15, 16, 52, 9, 49, 40, 45, 32, was a reformer.

My 20, 21, 26, 51, 30, is a young man.

My 13, 68, 52, 66, 54, 65, 53, 24, 23, 41, was a celebrated Grecian tyrant.

My 42, 87, 65, 69, 44, is a disease.

My 25, 43, 52, 28, 59, 51, 30, 47, 18, is a bird.

My 35, 50, 52, 65, 14, 57, 15, 29, 37, is an

My whole is a quotation from Campbell. NELLIE JACKMON.

Transposition.

I am composed of 4 letters.

And entire I am highly prized by most I cr-

Change my 1st and I become a musical in-

Change again and I am an agreeable com-Change my 2nd and 3rd and I become a nusical instrument, Change again and I am affection. Change my 3rd and I become a kind of Change again and I belong to a fisherman. Change my 4th and I raise.

Change my 1st and 4th and I am a preE. CLARK. Factoryville, Pa.

How many acres of the surface of the earth may be seen from the top of a steeple whose height is 400 feet, the earth being supposed to be a perfect sphere, whose circumference is 25,000 miles?

SAMUEL B. GRIFFITH. Philadelphia.

23" An answer is requested.

Problem.

What is the largest sphere or globe that can be whittled out of a cube containing 1,728 cubic inches?

D. C. G.

it through cotton, and wine, which, with a little sugar, makes a wholesome drink, at once cooling and palatable. It does not ferment.

